Restrictive Action

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

With continued cold weather predicted and soft-coal piles down to a week's supply, the District yesterday clamped down further on non-essential coal users.

These restrictive actions were taken:

1. J. Thomas Kennedy announced his Fuel Coordinating Committee will not approve any further requests for coal from churches, amusement places and places of public assembly.

However, if any of these places are now without coal they may be given enough to allow time for conversion, if possible, to other fuels or draining of pipes to prevent damage from freezing, Kennedy said.

2. District Commissioners, at the committee's recommendation, cut the coal ration of office buildings from 80 percent to 60 percent of normal.

Closings Not Imminent

Church leaders expressed concern over the ban, but there were no indications that any churches would be immediately closed.

The Very Rev. Msgr. James E. Cowhig, chancellor of the Archdiocese of Washington, said nearly 90 percent of the Catholic churches here are heated by coal. Most, he said, have only a week or two supply on hand.

Most parochial schools have their own heating plants, Msgr. Cowhig said. However, some get their heat direct from the church buildings. Kennedy said coal would be furnished to church buildings where persons live. He said he wasn't sure what the committee's answer would be to a request for coal to heat a school located in a church building.

May Have to "Button Up"

A check of three large Jewish synagogues showed each was heated by coal. The Washington Hebrew Congregation, 8th and I sts., nw., reported "very little" on hand. What will happen if the coal runs out? "People will just have to button up."

A spokesman for Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., said the church had about two weeks' supply, and predicted it would close when the supply is exhausted.

Marines Regain Two Battalions Ordered Cut Off

The Marine Corps has gotten back two of the combat battalions it lost under the defense economy program.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, it was learned last night, have agreed to lift the ceiling of 6 battalions set in the defense budget and permit the Corps to maintain whatever amphibious combat strength it can within the approved manpower and money strength in next year's budget.

Guilty on 5 Counts

Christoffel Again Convicted Of Perjury in 'Red' Inquiry

Harold R. Christoffel, former Milwaukee union leader, was convicted for a second time yesterday on charges of lying to the House Labor Committee when he denied he was a Communist.

A Federal court jury of eight women and four men found him guilty on all five counts of a perjury indictment. Maximum penalty is 2 to 10 years in prison on each count.

Christoffel, former head of the United Auto Workers (CIO) local at the Milwaukee Allis-Chalmers plant, was convicted on the same charges at a previous trial here in 1948. But the Supreme Court set aside the verdict and ordered a new trial because the Government failed to prove that a committee quorum was present.

Federal Judge F. Dickinson Letts ordered the tall, bespectacled union official committed to jail until he is sentenced. He has been free on $5000 bond.

The jury took the case at 11:31 a. m. (EST) and brought in its verdict at 3:50 p. m.

House FEPC Bill May Get Senate Teeth

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A voluntary fair employment practices bill with fact-finding and conciliation powers but none of the "teeth" the President asked yesterday was passed by the House by a vote of 240 to 177.

Shunted aside by an earlier Republican-Southern Democratic alliance was the Administration's uncompromising Powell bill, with power to act against job discrimination.

At a news conference, President Truman promptly renewed his stand for the original compulsory bill. He said he had not read the voluntary House version, but felt he had made his FEPC position perfectly plain in messages to Congress.

The substitute measure, studded with amendments and bearing a GOP label, was hustled through the House in 90 minutes after a 15-hour Dixie filibuster collapsed at 3:20 a. m. Thursday.

The compromise was tentatively approved, 221 to 178, just before exhausted House members hurried home for a few winks of sleep. Returning at noon yesterday, the House first refused, 239 to 177, to recommit the watered-down bill.

On the passage count Southern Democrats voted against the bill, even though they considered it "the best we could get." Administration Democrats split, most of them voting for the this-or-nothing voluntary measure "to keep FEPC alive" but a few casting a bitter "No" in protest. A 3-to-1 majority of Republicans voted for it. Here is how the House divided party-wise:

For the bill—115 Democrats, one Democratic-Liberal and 124 Republicans.

Against the bill—134 Democrats, 42 Republicans and one American-Laborite.

The House vote sent the bill to the Senate where Administration leaders said it failed to alter their determination to press for the uncompromising Senate McGrath bill.

Original Bill to Come Up

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said he will call up the Administration's original FEPC bill "not later than March 10."

Lucas told newsmen "a real FEPC bill with teeth" still will have a good chance in a House-Senate Conference Committee if the Senate can invoke cloture on the McGrath bill. Under the so-called Wherry cloture rule, the votes of 64 Senators are needed to shut off a Southern filibuster.

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, told newsmen:

"We will have strong support for cloture, particularly if the test comes on a voluntary bill."

Senate GOP Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) said he would vote for FEPC cloture. But Wherry said he favored voluntary legislation and will oppose "controls upon millions of Americans such as would prevail under the pro-

AF Settles Its Disputes With Guard

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force and National Guard made their peace yesterday after USAF chiefs gave way on all major points of dispute over control of the Air National Guard.

Defense officials hailed settlement of the long-standing and often bitter controversy over the Air Guard which has hampered a full development of the Nation's air reserve components.

Assistant Secretary of Air Force Harold C. Stuart extended the olive branch in an address to the Adjutants General Association convention which opened yesterday at the Mayflower.

He attributed many of the USAF-Guard differences to "misunderstandings," conceded the Air Force "did not discharge our full responsibilities," and announced a series of actions in which the USAF backed down on stands previously taken.

Plea for Cooperation

Stuart concluded with a plea for cooperation so the Nation may "devise every conceivable defense within our economic capability" to thwart a possible Soviet attack.

Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh of Minnesota, president of the National Guard Association, lauded Stuart's speech as "admirable and conciliatory" and said the guard leaders will "meet the Department of Air Force more than half way."

The president of the Adjutants General Association, Maj. Gen. William H. Harrison, jr., of Massachusetts, declared that the "differences" between the Air Force and guard "have now been reconciled." He commended USAF chiefs for their "constructive attitude."

Some of the Guard leaders felt Assistant Secretary Stuart might have "nailed down" settlement of the controversy by specifically disavowing earlier efforts to "federalize" the Air Guard. He didn't mention the word in his talk.

But General Walsh said he did not believe it was necessary. He declared he considered the Air Force had dropped this plan when it replaced Lieut. Gen. Elwood (Pete) Quesada as head of reserve components policy. Walsh, who has bitterly attacked Quesada in the past, attributed the plan to the Washington-born officer and one-time prominent local athlete.

More Fuel is Granted

Walsh also told reporters that a major point of difference between Air Guard chiefs and the Department of Defense—the cut in flying time—had been settled. Guard chiefs had denounced this economy order as a "sure death sentence" for a number of their pilots. They contended the reduction was below safe limits to keep fliers in practice.

The Minnesota general disclosed that orders have been issued granting each Guard wing commander an additional 150,000 gallons of fuel for the rest of the fiscal year.

Stuart announced that the Air

U. S. Now Hopes to Settle Controversies With British

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

With the British election out of the way, American officials are determined to make a new push toward settling serious British-American economic differences.

The first step, already being planned, will be a series of inter-department meetings here to appraise what has been done—and what has not been done—in British-American discussions of the past five months.

These meetings will involve the State, Commerce and Treasury Departments and the Economic Cooperation Administration. When the subordinate officials have reviewed and evaluated the problem, they will refer it to "the highest level"—that is, to Secretaries Acheson, Snyder and Sawyer and to Administrator Paul Hoffman of the ECA.

Later, probably not until the U. S. Is Sending Mission on Aid To Indochina

Secretary of State Acheson disclosed yesterday the United States is sending a special survey mission to southeast Asia to prepare the way for American help in bolstering the area against communism.

A State Department group headed by R. Allen Griffin, publisher of the Monterey (Calif.) Peninsula Herald, is due to leave next week on a tour of five countries. One is the new French-supported state of Viet Nam, in Indo-China, which promises to become a cold war hot spot because of the Communist sweep in neighboring China.

Diplomatic authorities said the group will look into the needs of Indo-China and other countries for military as well as economic assistance. Countries on the itinerary include Malaya, Burma, Thailand and Indonesia.

The State Department announced details of the mission after Secretary Acheson told Senators of American plans for Southeast Asia. He said that in Indochina there would be discussions on economic aid with the government of former emperor Bao Dai, the Viet Nam chief of state. Such talks already are going on with Thailand, Acheson said.

Loyalty Files To Be Secret, Truman Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday got into a new quarrel with Republicans over the Government's loyalty program.

He said at a White House news conference that he would not agree to the surrender of confidential loyalty files if they were subpenaed by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. That committee is about to investigate the charges of Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), that Communist Party workers are employed in the State Department.

Mr. Truman made it clear that if a Senate subpena should be served on him, his answer would be in effect: Try and enforce it.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, Republican leader of the Senate, called for a showdown, in the courts if necessary, to test the powers of Congress to subpena information it needs in its work.

Would Force Court Test

Wherry urged the Foreign Relations Committee to serve a subpena on Secretary of State Acheson for the loyalty papers of certain of his employes, and to cite him for contempt of Congress if he refused. That, he said, would lead to a court test.

Senator McCarthy, who has been saying that the State Department has a Communist spy ring headed by a "Big Three" and that a White House speech writer failed to pass a loyalty check, charged that President Truman's refusal to give up the loyalty files was a show of "arrogance."

Mr. Truman told reporters earlier that he would cooperate in every way with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to disprove McCarthy's false charges. But, he added, he was standing pat

13 Seats Lost By Socialists; Liberals Win One District

Conservatives Glum As Attlee Hails 'Encouraging' Trend; Third of Vote In London (Friday), Feb. 24 (AP).—The Labor Party, with a lead of 161 seats to 99 in returns from almost a third of the nation, claimed victory today in its fight to keep Britain on the road to socialism for five more years.

Leaders of Prime Minister Clement Attlee's party predicted a sure, though sharply reduced majority in the new House of Commons. The party winning a majority in the House runs the government.

[The United Press reported that Attlee himself said early today, "I cannot judge what will happen over all the country, but at the present it is encouraging."]

An air of gloom pervaded Conservative headquarters, but a spokesman for Winston Churchill's hard-fighting party said the issue still was in doubt.

With results in from 261 of 625 constituencies, Labor had clinched 161 seats; the Conservatives, 99, and the once-powerful Liberals, only one.

On the basis of these returns Labor Party spokesmen said a clear-cut victory was inevitable. One leader said Labor will have a 60-seat majority in the 625-seat House. In the old House of Commons, made up of 640 seats, Labor had a majority of 148.

A Conservative Party spokesman said: "Unless the Socialists have a lead of more than 50 when the final results are announced this morning, the Conservatives must still be in the fight with a very good chance."

Attlee, Bevin Keep Seats in Parliament

London (Friday), Feb. 24 (AP). Prime Minister Attlee and most top Labor ministers won reelection to the House of Commons in Britain's general election.

Attlee more than doubled the vote of his Conservative opponent, John Paul, in the Walthamstow West District of Greater London.

In the four-cornered race, the vote was Attlee, 21,095; Paul, 8988; A. W. Pim, Liberal, 4102, and Lester Hutchinson, Labor Independent, 704.

Among the other victors was Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

Senators Cut Housing Funds By 2 Billions

Post Reporter

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday slashed the Administration housing bill by more than two billion dollars and then reported it out by a 9-to-4 vote.

The measure includes provision for cooperative housing for "middle-income families"—those whose incomes range from $2400 to $4700 a year. The original loan figure for this was changed from two billion to one billion and a new plan for financing was adopted.

Changes in the bill were made to meet objections of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve system.

The loans under the revised plan would be insured by a National Mortgage Corp. for Housing Cooperatives.

The vote came after the committee defeated a proposal by Republican Senators Irving M. Ives of New York and Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire to eliminate direct Government-guaranteed loans to housing cooperatives.

The committee also cut from $3,256,000,000 to $2,006,000,000 the amount available to FHA for its so-called Title I and Title II mortgage insurance programs for private homes.

Title I, which expires next week, would be extended through July 1, 1952.

Other features of the revised bill:

1. It provides $150,000,000 for direct long-term loans to veterans for homes when they cannot obtain private financing. The original bill called for three million dollars.

2. A total of three million dollars for long-term low-cost loans to educational institutions for student and faculty housing.

3. Authorizes another 25 million dollars for Reconstruction Finance Corp. loans to prefabricated housing manufacturers.

New Grandma, 40, Becomes Mother For 12th Time

New York, Feb. 23 (NYHT). Mrs. Catherine Johnsen, 40, proud of becoming a grandmother for the first time at 6 p. m. Wednesday, became a mother for the twelfth time at 7:58 a. m. today, when two Brooklyn policemen sped to her home and delivered a 7-pound boy. Mrs. Johnsen, married at 16, now has six boys and six girls, including a set of twin girls. Her husband, 42, is a blacksmith.

Mrs. Jean Johnsen Rogers, 17, the Johnsen's third child, gave birth, without the aid of policemen, to her first child, a boy.

Barrett Moves 3 Captains; Changes Mind

By Alfred E. Lewis and Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporters

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, last night ordered three of his captains transferred to new precincts, and within five hours cancelled the transfers.

There was a strong hint the first orders stemmed from the current Capitol investigation into Washington crime, and that the cancellation followed a request for White House intervention.

The transfer orders would have moved:

Capt. Anthony Richitt from the Third to the Eighth Precinct.

Capt. Charles Sullivan from the Second to the Third Precinct.

Capt. John Fondahl from the Eighth to the Second Precinct.

The transfer orders followed an extraordinary conference yesterday afternoon between Barrett, his immediate superior in the District Government, Commissioner John Russell Young, and Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher.

Maher is the District Government's chief liaison man with the House investigating committee, and has been attending the hearings in the role of counsel for the police department.

Woman GOP Aide Gives Democrats $2000 'to Help Out'

Denver, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Mrs. David T. Chalmers explained today how she happened to contribute $2000 to the Democratic Party while serving as a Republican committeewoman.

"I didn't realize people took politics so seriously," she said.

As a matter of fact, she added, "I didn't know I was the committeewoman. I just took over some work to help Mrs. Edgar McComb, who was the committeewoman, and I guess they decided I had replaced her."

"I was just trying to help out. I like to help people. I help the Red Cross. I help the Community Chest. Why shouldn't I help the Democrats and Republicans?"

Asked point-blank if she was a Republican, Mrs. Chalmers said:

"Maybe I am. I don't understand all these things about politics."

Phone Rate Tariff Filed

50-Cent Increase In Average Bill

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The rates for Washington telephone service in residences and most business uses would be increased by 50 cents a month under a proposed tariff filed yesterday by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

The company also requested an increase of from $1 to $35 a month in service to private branch exchange systems.

The tariff was prepared by the company as its proposal for apportioning among its customers the $2,250,000 increase in rates authorized by the District Public Utilities Commission last Monday.

The tariff will be considered at a public hearing before the PUC Tuesday at 10 a.m. in the District Building.

The firm originally asked for an average 13.9 percent increase calculated to yield an additional $3,249,000 in revenues. After lengthy hearings, the PUC allowed an average 9.6 percent hike.

John M. Howard, general commercial manager of C. & P., said the rate schedule would increase telephone bills for both large and small users about the same on a per-phone basis. Although the charges on large switchboards were hiked as much as 150 per cent, on a per-phone basis, this would come down to 9.6 percent average, he said.

Charges for service connections, moves and change of instruments are unchanged in the proposed tariff with the exception that move charges for a phone line with several extensions will be computed

Herblock Wins Broun Award

New Yorker Is A Co-Winner

Herbert Block (Herblock), of The Washington Post, and Ted Poston, of the New York Post, last night were named co-winners of the annual Heywood Broun Award of the American Newspaper Guild.

Herblock was honored "for the general excellence and effectiveness of his cartoons and for their penetrating and powerful comments" on the national scene.

The judges decided that Herblock "invariably fought for the people's causes and did so much in the manner, though not in the medium, of Broun," the late columnist who was a founder of the Guild.

The awards were announced at the opening session last night of the National Civil Liberties Clearing House at the Hotel 2400. The Broun award judges were: Alan Barth of The Washington Post; John Hersey of New York, and Roland E. Wolseley, professor of journalism at Syracuse University. Barth withdrew from the discussion of the entry of Herblock, his colleague on The Washington Post.

Poston, a reporter for the New York Post, was honored for "his courageous coverage" of a Florida rape trial in which two Negro youths were sentenced to die and a third was sentenced to life imprisonment. Poston, a Negro, was himself forced to run for his life with another reporter and two lawyers after being chased for 40 miles over back-country roads.

Herblock and Poston each received a $500 cash prize and a Guild citation. It was the first time the Broun Award has been voted to two men for separate entries. The award is given each

Pius XII Reported Ill, Refusing Advice of Doctors

By the United Press

Radio Commentator Ray Henle said last night Pope Pius XII is seriously ill, but has refused doctors' advice to drop all activities in order to prolong his life.

Henle said he has "exclusive information" that the Pope is suffering with an acute case of sclerosis of the leg vessels.

Henle said the Pope has refused to follow the suggestions that "in order to prolong his life he should immediately drop practically all of his duties and functions." He said the Pope is reported to have reminded his physicians that thousands of pilgrims are coming to Rome for Holy Year celebration. He quoted Pius as saying he would fulfill his duties regardless of the consequences.

Flash Gasoline Fire Blisters U. S. Carrier

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 23 (AP).—A flash fire today blistered the side of the aircraft carrier Valley Forge, but was estinguished before causing damage. No one was injured.

A spark was believed to have ignited gasoline as it was being shifted from the forward to the aft part of the carrier. Flames shot up to the flight deck, jammed with planes, but none was damaged. The blaze was brought under control quickly.

Dr. Millikan Waits 3 Hours to Speak, Gets His Revenge

Van Nuys, Calif., Feb. 23 (AP).—Kept waiting more than three hours to give a speech last night before the local Chamber of Commerce, Dr. Robert A. Millikan, noted scientist, did what many an after-dinner speaker has no doubt wished to do.

He said: "At this hour, I fear the mind is too weary to listen to the speech I have prepared. I had intended to discuss one of the chapters in my new book, 'The Road to Peace.' Any of you who are interested may read the book."

Then he sat down.

"It was an unfortunate incident," said Secretary-Manager James Moran. "If Dr. Millikan feels there was a lack of respect for him, we are abjectly sorry."

Rare Earth Oxide, Uranium Ore Find, May Be Largest

Sundance, Wyo., Feb. 23 (AP).—A deposit of uranium ore and rare earth oxide, believed to be the largest of its kind anywhere on the globe, has been discovered in the Bear Lodge Mountains north of here, mining interests said today.

A. J. Katches, Duluth, Minn., mining engineer for Telmor Engineering Corp., said he made the discovery last August while investigating fluoride deposits. Announcement of the find was withheld until development work was done and ore assays conclusively indicated the extent of the deposit.

Geologists say the new find can be developed into the only known open pit mine of radioactive ore and rare earth oxide. The mineral formations, spokesmen said, are from 50 to 500 feet wide and 900 to 1200 feet long.

Hawaii, Alaska Bills To Go Before House

Virginia Tenants Near District Get Hope for New Rent Control

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Feb. 23—Governor John S. Battle today spoke a word of encouragement to advocates of rent control in the Virginia area near Washington.

He said he plans to sign the statewide decontrol bill passed by the General Assembly. But, asked about moves to exempt Northern Virginia, Battle said he thinks the latest Magruder "local initiative" proposal "might very well take care of the situation" there.

Battle said that judging from the "flood of telegrams" asking for retention of controls in Arlington, Alexandria and Fairfax, "there appears to be an emergency."

Delegate J. Maynard Magruder, of Arlington, has introduced in the General Assembly a bill to give the Governor authority to reimpose controls in localities, provided (1) local governing bodies request them by resolution, (2) the Governor finds that an emergency exists, and (3) landlords and property owners are guaranteed a "fair return" from tenants.

Any such controls would not extend beyond July, 1951, under the Magruder proposal.

A spokesman in the Governor's office said an "epidemic" of telegrams—some 200—had been received by the Governor asking that he veto the Boatwright bill for State-wide decontrol.

That bill, said Battle, "was passed by terrific majorities in both houses—certainly with sufficient leeway to pass, no matter what action I might take."

"As presently advised," he added, "I will sign it."

Sander Claims Cancer Patient Died Before He Injected Air

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 23 (U.P.).—When is a person dead?

That question is going to be debated here in the courtroom where Dr. Hermann N. Sander is on trial for murder because he injected 40 cubic centimeters of air into the veins of a patient in the last stages of cancer.

As testimony began, the State announced it would base its prosecution on the contention that 40 cubic centimeters constitutes a lethal dose. The issue will be challenged by the defense, which will assert that Sander's patient, Mrs. Abbie Borroto, was dead when the air was injected.

The disclosure was made during cross-examination of Dr. Harold I. Loverud, president of the Hillsborough County Hospital staff. It was in that hospital that Mrs. Borroto, emaciated and down to perhaps 65 pounds in weight, died.

During the last night she was alive she was given tremendous doses of powerful pain-killing drugs, such as cocaine, demerol and pantopon and early December 4 there was some question as to whether her pulse had stopped.

In presenting the State's case, Attorney General William L. Phinney first disclosed that nurses had difficulty taking Mrs. Borroto's pulse that morning. Then he disclosed that a doctor—whom he did not identify—attempted to take the woman's pulse with no success. However, Phinney said, medical testimony will be offered to show death was caused by the air injection.

Dr. Loverud was asked by Louis E. Wyman, chief defense counsel, if he knew how much air would be required to kill a person. The doctor said he did not know. That line of questioning was intended to weaken or break down the prosecution's contention that 40 cubic centimeters of air constituted a fatal injection.

Crommelin May Get Furlough on Half Pay

Capt. John G. Crommelin may be furloughed on half pay if he disobeys a Navy order barring him from criticizing Department of Defense "organization or officials."

An old and rarely invoked law permits officers to be so punished for a maximum of six months, and it is known that its use has been considered in Crommelin's case.

More than a month ago, top Navy officials weighed the question of furloughing the outspoken opponent of current Pentagon policies and the unification program. They decided against such action at the time in hope he would subside because it might only "make a martyr" of him.

However, it is possible that more drastic punishment may be considered today if the war hero and "rebel" is considered to have disobeyed the latest orders addressed to him. Earlier he was under general directions not to criticize his superiors. Now he has specific orders on the subject.

Heavier punishment could be given only by a general court-martial. Pentagon chiefs have been reluctant to try Crommelin on such charges, for the trial probably would have to be open and they feel it would merely give him a "national forum" to air his views. On the other hand, should Crommelin be deemed guilty of direct disobedience to orders the Navy might feel it had no alternative but to order a court-martial.

Lip Service Attacked In Crommelin Speech

San Francisco, Feb. 23 (AP).—Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin, jr., whose public statements criticizing service unification brought him an official reprimand, spoke out today against what he called "lip service."

Crommelin, who yesterday was ordered by Admiral Forrest Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, to "refrain from public statements ... critical of the ... Department of Defense," spoke at a luncheon meeting of the San Francisco Business League.

He opened his address by reading the order addressed to him by Admiral Sherman.

Then, without comment, he read the oath he took as a naval officer in which he swore to defend the Constitution of the United States against its enemies, both foreign and domestic.

He told the league he didn't mean to be critical of any individual or group of individuals.

"You can't do a job without homest opinion," he said. "I consider any man who gives me lip service as a 'yes' man, to be treacherous."

Crommelin, who has 15 speaking engagements, said earlier he had no intention of canceling any of them unless specifically ordered to do so.

Historic Woodley Sold; Fate Hangs On Zoning Board

The historic Woodley estate, at 3000 Cathedral ave., was purchased by Ned Bord, a director of Randall H. Hagner & Co., and a group of associates yesterday.

The 17¾-acre estate with its 150-year-old manor house had been given to Phillips Andover Academy, Mass., by alumnus Henry L. Stimson, former Cabinet officer.

A sale contract provides that the house and a portion of the land will pass to the Maret School, Inc., 2118 Kalorama rd. nw., in exchange for the private school's plant and land. The contract is contingent on the result of a hearing in March on the school's application for rezoning of that section of the Woodley estate.

Dancer Would Be Mrs. Garry Davis

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

AUDREY PETERS, 20-year-old Hollywood dancer, said yesterday she is going to marry Garry Davis, 28, self-styled "world citizen," whom she has never met, but with whom she has been corresponding for some time. At the same time, Davis, son of Orchestra Leader Meyer Davis, who tore up his passport two years ago, started efforts in France to regain his American citizenship. Embassy sources in Paris said Davis could apply to "emigrate to the United States." Although he declined to comment on the romance reports, Miss Peters said she would meet him in Haiti, where she plans to go as a medical missionary

Navy Has Plane to Hunt Down Radar-Proof Snorkel Subs

Burbank, Calif., Feb. 23 (AP).—Navy acceptance of a plane specifically designed to hunt down the formerly radar-proof "Snorkel" submarines was announced today by Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

The craft is a new version of the P2V Neptune and is equipped with magnetic detection gear which permits pin-point location of submarines at any depth, the company said.

Heretofore airborne radar equipment has been unable to detect subs running under water with only the end of the snorkel breathing tube showing on the surface. The new Neptune, the P2V-4, is able to determine the depth at which the sub is running.

Once radar contact has been made, the sub-killer speeds to the area and drops a radio sonobuoy. This floating device contains a microphone which picks up the noise of the sub's propeller and relays it to the plane thus establishing the submerged vessel's position. The plane then tries to knock out the sub, or at least keep it submerged and traveling at reduced speed until surface vessels can close in for the kill.

The P2V-4 is a sister of the "Truculent Turtle," which holds the world's nonrefueled distance record of 11,236 statute miles, set three years ago. Although about the size of a B-17, Neptunes have made more than 100 take-offs from carriers.

Spaatz Sees Reds Set For War in 2 or 3 Years

New York, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Gen. Carl Spaatz said today the United States can expect only "a short breathing spell" of two or three years before Russia will be ready to launch a full-scale war.

Russia already is on a war footing, but in terms of airplanes, submarines and atomic bombs is "almost but probably not quite ready," Spaatz wrote in Newsweek magazine.

AF and Guard Settle Disputes

Force Continental Air Command finally has prepared training directives for the Air Guard, which now are being published.

"It is regrettable," he said, "that the Air Force has not previously issued such training directives. In this area we feel that we did not previously discharge our full responsibility to the Air National Guard."

Other Differences

Other points of difference which Stuart and Guard leaders revealed as having been settled:

1. Air Force demands for 45 days of training for the Air Guard annually. Stuart said the USAF never intended this to mean 45 consecutive days, as was interpreted, but for 15 days active duty, two full day drills a month and six days to cover delays caused by weather in returning from extended training flights.

He indicated he personally favored settling the moot question of weekend drills by holding one double drill (a full day) a month and two normal drills.

2. The Air Force, Stuart said, is dropping efforts to put a USAF supply officer at each Guard air base—a move interpreted by Guard chiefs as aimed at establishing a direct line of supply between the Air Force and each unit.

New Readiness Test

3. Stuart said the Air Force also is abandoning another proposal—the establishment on each Governor's staff of an Air Guard officer independent of and with equal rank to the State adjutant general.

4. Stuart announced that a new type of "operational readiness test" will be given each air unit—not during summer training. The old type inspection was a sore point because Regular Air Force inspectors rate some units "unsatisfactory" for things beyond their controls—such as lack of airplanes. Walsh said this latter will be eliminated under the new test.

5. Nonflying Air Force officers of the rank of first or second lieutenant will be permitted to take flight training and return directly to their unit. The Air Force had wanted them to take one to three years active duty first.

6. Stuart also announced that a new air base construction program has been worked out calling for 106 projects in 30 States, compared with 129 projects in 31 States voted by Congress and only 59 projects in 13 States insisted upon by the National Guard Bureau.

Sen. Tydings Warns Of A-Control 'Trap'

By The Associated Press

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) yesterday urged withdrawal of the American plan to outlaw all atomic and hydrogen weapons unless other nations guarantee to scale down conventional weapons.

Tydings, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a member of the joint Senate-House Atomic Committee, told the Senate:

"If the Russians, at some future date, accept our proposals for the prohibition of the manufacture, possession and use of the A and H. bombs, without agreeing to our other proposals for the scaling down of conventional weapons, we will be caught in a trap."

It was the first time that a high-ranking Senator has publicly suggested that this Nation could not accept its own atomic control plan, unless afforded other guarantees against attack.

The U. S. plan, largely blueprinted by Bernard Baruch, has been adopted by a majority of the United Nations. But Russia has fought it to a standstill.

President Truman told his news conference yesterday that he sees no need for a new United States approach to international atomic controls.

The "present advantage in military might" that the United States has over Russia, Tydings said, is due primarily to our "large stockpile of atomic bombs and Russia's relatively small stockpile."

May Bring Disaster

He contended that further efforts on our part to junk atomic weapons "without accompanying and compensating disarmament programs by Russia and other nations may lead the United States and the democratic nations associated with us into the abyss of disaster."

The United States has proposed to the United Nations (a) disarmament of convention weapons, and (b) the placing of the whole global field of atomic energy under an international agency with rigid inspection and control authority.

The latter plan, although adopted by a large majority of U. N members, has been rejected by Russia, who has flatly refused to accept the stiff inspection and control features.

Further, Russia has proposed that all atomic weapons be junked as a prerequisite to any agreement. The United States has contended that atomic disarmament take place by stages as controls become effective.

Tydings noted that the United States disarmament proposals are pending before different U. N. committees. He told the Senate:

"If the two proposals pending in the United Nations are not henceforth handled by the same committee, so that any disarmament by one great nation is compensated for by an equal disarmament by others, then we ought to recall our offer from the United Nations. Such a policy is neither sound nor wise, nor likely to be rewarded by real accomplishment."

Tydings also:

1. Renewed his plea for the United States to take the lead in calling a world-wide disarmament conference.

2. Sharply criticized an article written by George F. Kennan, State Department counselor for the March issue of Readers Digest, entitled "Is War With Russia Inevitable"

He quoted Kennan as saying in the article, presumably for the State Department, that there are only three alternatives open to us—a return to isolationism and armed neutrality, war, or to continue to throw U. S. weight into balance when prospects are good that it will help prevent further expansion of communism.

"Mr. Kennan's three alternatives, taken together, are mountainous in their defeatism," Tydings said. "They are not in the American tradition. They place a new low on American ingenuity. They offer nothing but the ultimate expectation of the incineration of mankind."

He went on to urge a fourth alternative—the calling of a world-wide disarmament conference and said its objective should be stated by all means possible to people behind Russia's Iron Curtain.

Earlier, the Joint Atomic Committee heard Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, discuss the civil defense problem in a closed session.

McMahon declined to disclose Bradley's views, but did tell reporters in a carefully worded verbal statement.

"I think I speak the sentiment of the committee members present that prospects of more destructive weapons such as the hydrogen bomb makes more necessary the discussion of this subject (civil defense).

Swiss Admits Spying For U. S. During War

Bern, Switzerland, Feb. 25 (AP).—Willy Gerber, 47, a Swiss army mechanic who at one time had $10,000 in a New York bank, pleaded guilty today to being a wartime spy for the United States, and serving France and Britain for a longer period.

He was brought before a military court. He faces a maximum penalty of life imprisonment. Junior officials of the British, French and U. S. legations attended the trial, but declined comment.

India Charges Pakistan Hides Mass Murder

New Delhi, Feb. 23. (U.P.).—Indian Prime Minister Nehru today said Pakistan had thrown an "iron curtain" over Bengal to cloak mass murder of Hindus by Moslems in East Pakistan.

Nehru told Parliament that between 600 and 1000 Hindus have been massacred in Dacca, capital of East Pakistan, alone. He proposed that the International Red Cross investigate.

Nehru said Pakistan Prime Minister Liaguat Ali Khan had rejected suggestions the two visit Bengal together. Pakistan refused also to appoint a joint fact-finding commission, Nehru added.

If Pakistan continues to turn down the Indian proposals "maybe we shall have to adopt other methods," he said.

Nehru quoted Liaquat as saying "no joint commission is necessary or desirable" and that the situation on the Pakistan side of Bengal is "normal."

"An iron curtain had fallen over East Bengal which has prevented accurate information coming through except in driblets," Nehru said.

Hungary Requests U.S., Britain To Reduce Diplomatic Staffs

Budapest, Feb. 23. (AP)—Communist Hungary tonight requested the United States and Britain to reduce their diplomatic staffs in this country.

In notes to the two Legations, Hungary said the number of their diplomatic personel here "greatly exceeds their prewar number and is more than the staff of the Hungarian Legations in Washington and London."

The request came on the heels of a break in diplomatic relations between the United States and Communist Bulgaria.

It followed also the trial of Robert A. Vogeler, an American businessman, and Edgar Sanders, a Briton, on charges of sabotage and espionage. Vogeler Tuesday was sentenced to 15 years and Sanders to 13.

(Diplomatic officials said in London yesterday that the United States and Britain were discussing the possibility of a break in relations with Hungary in retaliation for the heavy sentences given Vogeler and Sanders.

(There was no official confirmation. Britain was said to be cool to the proposal.)

The notes sent to Britain and the United States said the Vogeler trial showed "the purposes served by the maintenance of such disproportionately large staffs at the Legation" and added Hungary "can see no reason for the maintenance of this situation."

(The State Department in Washington declined comment pending official receipt of the Hungarian note.)

Soviet Attack Unlikely Now, Kennan Holds

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—George F. Kennan, counselor of the State Department, said today "current Stalinist doctrines does not demand war."

"It is hardly likely," Kennan wrote in the Reader's Digest, "That the Russians are now charting an early military onslaught on the western world."

Communists, he wrote, seek the collapse of western capitalism as soon as possible but "they would not wish to endanger in any major way the security of the world citadel of communism, the USSR."

By tradition, Kennan said, Russian imperialism has been a "process of nibbling, carefully geared to the digestive organs of the Russian state." he added:

"The experience with the present eastern European satellites indicates that in this case Soviet imperialism bit off more than it could comfortably chew. The resulting discomfort should make the Kremlin more wary, rather than less, about taking on much bigger bites just at this time."

However, Kennan warned, the possibility of war still exists. The United States, he said, should continue to keep itself militarily strong, continue to assure its allies of support and maintain respect abroad for American institutions by displaying respect for them at home.

American policy, he said, should continue to be one which "firmly rejects all defeatism about a future war and aims at keeping alive and pursuing vigorously every possibility for solving international differences."

(The full text of Kennan's article will appear in next Sunday's Washington Post.)

Defeat in 'Peaceful Contest' Seen for Capitalists by Reds

Moscow, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—A Soviet military leader predicted today that socialism would defeat capitalism "in a peaceful contest." He added that Russia is able to crush any aggressor.

The statement was made by Col. Gen. Fedor F. Kuznetsov, chief of the army's political department, in an article in the army daily Red Star on the thirty-second anniversary of the Soviet army.

"USSR warriors with the entire Soviet nation are profoundly convinced that a triumph of socialism over capitalism is insured in a peaceful contest," Kuznetsov wrote. He added that they were convinced also that they would dispose of any enemy daring to make an attack.

The Communist organ Pravda, in a theme repeated by all other newspapers, said that "nobody will succeed in frightening the Soviet people with 'atomic' or any other blackmail."

"The Soviet people are confident that should the imperialists unleash a new war against our peace-loving country, then the Soviet Union with the support of peace-loving nations through the entire world will crush any aggressors."

None of the anniversary articles mentioned the hydrogen bomb. Several writers, however, mentioned "atomic blackmail" and made several references to "superbombs which do not scare the Soviet people."

The chief of the Soviet army's general staff, Army General Sergei Shtemenko, said in a six-column article in Pravda that "the enemies of entire progressive mankind—the Anglo-American imperialists—brandish their arms increasingly and demonstratively."

Another army leader, Col. Gen. Mikhail S. Malinin, predicted doom for "imperialism." Malinin also outlined again the Soviet position on atomic control.

"The Soviet Union is waging a persistent struggle for lasting peace," he said. The Soviet Government in its ban on atomic weapons, control of atomic energy and destruction of atomic stockpiles is outlawing propaganda for a third world war.

"The Soviet Union repeatedly has proposed a reduction of arms and armed forces of the five great powers. The Soviet Union does not want war."

Firemen Save Village in Eritrea Riots

Asmara, Eritrea, Feb. 23. (AP).—Fire-fighters saved a whole village today from arsonist burning in Christian-Moslem riots that have killed 32 and mutilated many more since the outbreak Monday.

All the casualties were among Eritreans. Many were struck down in hand-to-hand fighting with knifers. They are victims of the communal blood feud over the Coptic Christian campaign to join at least of Eritrea with neighboring Ethiopia and Moselm counter-cries for independence in the disposition of this prewar Italian colony on the Red Sea.

Coptic Ethiopia contends Emperor Haile Selassie's landlocked realm is entitled to a seaport.

A United Nations commission assigned to make a recommendation for Eritrea's future on the basis of public sentiment warned the feuding factions their shows of force would not influence its decisions.

Belgian Reds Routed

Brussels, Feb. 23 (AP).—Three hundred gendarmes, carrying guns and tear-gas bombs, drove 100 picketing Communists away from the Belgian Ministry of Defense today. The pickets were protesting the presence of Gen. Charles T. Lanham, United States military assistance chief for Belgium.

Supersonic Planes Of Navy to Have Escape Cockpits

The Navy yesterday announced development of a new escape cockpit for pilots who have to bail out of high-altitude supersonic planes.

Known as an "ejection cockpit capsule," it is completely enclosed, pressurized and insulated. The pilot could drop safely from high altitudes where the atmosphere and severe cold usually prove fatal. The capsule's fall is controlled by automatic parachutes.

The Navy said the cockpit floats and can be used as a raft for pilots who have to land in the sea.

Court Awards 90 Planes to Chinese Reds

Hongkong, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Chinese Communists won in the Supreme Court of this British Crown colony tonight their battle for 90 former Nationalist planes valued at 20 million dollars.

The loser was retired U. S. Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, who announced last December 18 that his Civil Air Transport line had purchased the planes. They formerly were owned by the Nationalist-controlled Chinese National Aviation Corp. and Central Air Transport Corp.

The court refused to name Chennault as custodian of the planes and lifted the injunction it had imposed until ownership was established.

A CNAC spokesman said the planes would be flown to Peiping.

They Want to Get Married . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

BUT ASKED AT THE WRONG PLACE—After driving to Towson, Md., from Honesdale, Pa., Robert W. Kimble and Alice Jane Bonham, both 16 years old, made one mistake when they asked where they could get married—they asked at a police station. They are pictured as they waited for their parents

Black Stresses Value of World Bank's Advice

Montreal, Feb. 23 (AP).—President Eugene R. Black said today the technical advice offered some countries by the World Bank is as valuable to them as financial aid.

But the American head of the 48-nation institution stressed that it is "a Bank, and not an agency for relief or emergency aid."

"We borrow funds in the private capital market for relending abroad, and we expect our loans to be repaid," Black said in an address prepared for the Investment Dealers Association of Canada.

"More important, we lend only for projects which we are satisfied will genuinely increase the productivity and economic strength of the borrowing countries. . .

"It is an indispensable condition of the Bank's success and continued operations that it lend soundly, and pay its obligations.

"Our purpose, however, is not to make profits but, while remaining solvent and meeting our obligations, to contribute effectively to the twin goals of reconstruction and development."

Black told about technical aid provided in Brazil, El Salvador, Colombia and Turkey by Bank missions sent to those countries.

In Colombia, he noted, the mission "developed for the first time some estimates of Colombia's national income, of the amount of savings, of where those savings comes from and where they go, of the likely course of production in various fields, and so on."

These data, Black observed, "form the indispensable framework both for informed investment and for sound public policy."

"Our aim," he said, "is not to produce a blueprint of a five-year plan that could be adopted by the government (of any country) without change or amplification.

"Rather, these (mission) reports are intended to be working papers, on the basis of which the government concerned can itself evolve a satisfactory program and policies for development, if it accepts the general pattern recommended by our mission."

U. S. Mission To Indochina

Cross for heroism in World War II.

Griffin will be accompanied by a small group of technical experts and by Samuel Hayes, special assistant to Willard Thorp, assistant secretary for economic affairs, and by William McAfee, an area specialist in the department's Far Eastern Affairs Bureau.

An announcement said the mission will visit Saigon, Singapore, Rangoon, Bangkok and Jakarta. It said the mission will study needs for "possible projects" throughout the southeast and also lay the groundwork for programs under pending point four aid legislation for underdeveloped areas.

Also to be looked into is the possibility of using in Indochina ECA funds earmarked for France, and possible export-import bank loans. A $100,000,000 loan was promised this month to Indonesia.

Outlining American officials' plans in testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Acheson said the State Department is "deeply concerned" over the so-called rice bowl of Asia, which includes Indo-China, Thailand and Burma.

The United States looks "hopefully," he said, for the southeast Asia countries to join together in an economic, political and social program to be backed by limited American dollar assistance.

Acheson stressed that these countries themselves must take the initiative in forming any such union and made it clear there is no present thought of an aid program large enough to be termed a Marshall Plan for Asia.

The Secretary made no mention of American military assistance. This currently is under consideration for at least four countries—Viet Nam, Indonesia, Thailand and India. President Truman has a free hand to support them with arms up to the limits of his special 75-million-dollar fund for use in the "general area" of China.

Acheson's testimony centered on support for the third year $2,950,000,000 ECA program for western Europe, but he also discussed developments in Indo-China and neighbor lands which are apparently shaping up toward a climax.

Russia and Soviet bloc countries have extended diplomatic recognition to Ho Chi-minh, Moscow trained leader of the postwar revolt against the French and the native leaders the French are backing.

LOBSTER MEAT

Flown from CUBA to GIANT in 24 Hours!

Last Monday marked a new epoch in the business of bringing to you the world's finest delicacies. Last Monday morning, at National Airport, an Eastern Air Lines transport plane brought to GIANT FOOD STORES the first air borne shipment of quick-frozen, cooked, "CONGA" Brand rock lobster meat to enter the Nation's Capital! Its actual flying time was less than 24 hours from the time it left its Cuban source until it was turned over to GIANT's officials.

This rock lobster meat is even better than that to which you've been accustomed. It's the "filet mignon" of the seafood world! It's all from the lobsters' tails—and it's the tails that provide the more tender, better flavored, finer texture meat. It's all meat—no waste. And because it's frozen after cooking, it's ready for eating just as it is (for cold dishes). And, for hot dishes, it merely needs to be thawed out before being mixed with whatever other ingredients your recipe calls for. Nor is it expensive. A new, plastic top can, that contains enough for approximately three portions is only—

U. S. to Seek Solution of Serious Economic Differences With British, Following Election

British government has submitted its new budget to the House of Commons early in April, some officials here think there will have to be another conference of American and British cabinet officers, whichever party in Britain may be in power.

The last such meeting, in September, brought Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Cripps, to Washington to find emergency ways of easing the British dollar shortage.

Officially it has not mattered to the United States which party would win the election. The highest American interest has been to get the election out of the way, and to have a British government of either party with a decisive majority.

For at least five months, ever since the burst of activity that followed the September talks, a creeping paralysis has set in over British-American economic decisions.

The Labor ministers have had the election on their minds; their civil servants have found it increasingly hard to get decisions or instructions out of them.

The Americans, too, have found the British unreasonably stubborn and sometimes making great issues out of molehills, as in the three months' bickering over the bilateral agreement on military aid.

Nobody here pretends that the election has been solely responsible. The Americans, no doubt, have contributed their share of errors, and the highest officials here may not have given enough personal attention to the British economic problems.

Whatever the reason, the two governments are stalemated; they have not agreed on ways to save more than a small fraction of the British dollar outlay, and some American officials are afraid of having a new British exchange crisis dumped in their laps by midsummer if the new British government delays or evades decisions.

Three Major Questions

The major controversies are three, as follows:

(1) The United States would like to see the British move much faster toward closer economic association with the continental European countries. This means, in particular, full British participation in a European payments union which would lower trade and currency barriers and widen trade within Europe. The British are fearful of losing dollars or gold if they take the plunge into such a payments union. ECA Administrator Hoffman is still hopeful, though, that an effective payments union can be formed within a few weeks.

(2) The British are now spending about 600 million dollars a year on imports of oil. The two governments have been at loggerheads for months over how to reduce this dollar drain. The British have tried to do it by limiting imports of oil from American companies into the entire sterling area. The Americans insist that the British could save dollars just as well by letting the American companies sell their oil and take sterling or other non-dollar currencies in payment.

(3) The enormous British war debts to sterling countries—the so-called "sterling balances"—have acted as a double drain on Britain's gold and dollar reserves. The holders of these balances—chiefly India, Pakistan, Egypt and Australia—have been entitled to draw dollars from London and also to get huge quantities of British goods which the British might otherwise have sold to earn dollars.

Might Tighten Withdrawals

There has been vague talk in London of tightening up on these withdrawals, and also of asking the United States to take over a part of the debt, but no proposals have come so far. Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador, returned here from London this week without, so far as could be learned yesterday, bringing any specific proposals from his government.

But there is one reason why American officials may expect some British move on the sterling balances soon after the election. This is the British government's eagerness to get American help for southeast Asia, in accordance with the decisions of the recent Colombo conference of Commonwealth foreign ministers.

The economic future of southeast and south Asia depends to some extent on the future of the sterling balances. There can be no realistic discussion of one part of the problem without discussion of the other. So there is at least a chance that on this issue, as on others, the two governments can move ahead faster and more cooperatively than before.

Moscow Sets Spy Traps for U. S. Personnel

Berlin, Feb. 23 (NYHT).—A western diplomat just arrived from Moscow reported today several Russian attempts to frame members of the American Embassy, evidently with the intention of establishing another case of espionage against Americans.

He said Russians have been trying to contact embassy clerks and Army personnel living in American House. Brushed off, they placed a note in their windows saying: "I would like to work for American intelligence. Please meet me outside."

Several attempts of this kind were made almost within sight of Soviet police who guard the main entrance to American House. Next door is a secret police building.

bassy first secretary leaving a the-

A Russian approached an emater. When the American refused to be drawn into conversation, the Russian tried to force a note into his hand. The American pushed him away, jumped into his car and drove off.

The opinion of foreign diplomats in Moscow is that Soviet police are trying to seize an American as a hostage for Valentin Gubitchev, a Russian now on trial for espionage in the United States with Judith Coplon.

The trial of an American in Moscow would be in line with the campaign in eastern Europe to brand Americans as spies and saboteurs, like Robert A. Vogeler, United States business man convicted in Budapest.

Nobles Lose Suit For Hesse Jewels

Judge Edward A. Tamm refused yesterday to order that the $1,500,000 Hesse jewels be turned over to Prince Wolfgang anad Landgrafin Margarethe Hesse of the German nobility.

The gems had been stolen by former Col. Jack Durant, his wife, former Wac Capt. Kathleen Durant, and a Maj. David N. Watson. The District Court jurist ruled that the Hesses and their lawyer, Joseph S. Robinson, could not maintain the suit.

Labor Claims Victory as Tories Begin to Lag

encies were being counted during the night.

In biting into the Labor majority, the Conservatives in early returns took 13 Commons seats which had been held by Laborites. In the same returns the Conservatives surrendered only one seat they had held in the old Parliament.

Because of the revision of constituencies, it was impossible to make comparisons between this year's results and those of 1945 in many cases.

[At 9:30 last night, the parliamentary correspondent of the British Broadcasting Corporation reported:

["What matters is not the lead of one party over the other in the early returns, but the results of key contests. With these in mind, it is not too early to say things begin to look hopeful for Labor.

["Labor has held many of the critical seats. There are some signs of a Conservative swing in South and West London, but one looks in vain for any decisive reverse in Labor's fortunes."]

Among the defeated Conservative candidates was Randolph Churchill, son of the Conservative leader.

[The total popular vote, the United Press reported, at 3:30 a. m. was:

Labor: 4,975,388.
Conservative: 4,318,200.
Liberal: 901,384.]

Churchill, settled down comfortably in the parlor of his home at Hyde Park Gate on the West Side of London, watched special teleprinter machines tap out the results of his crusade against the socialized state.

The Conservative leader will not know his fate until sometime this afternoon, when his Woodford constituency begins counting.

Attlee, after spending most of the day in his home district, dropped in at Labor headquarters at midnight to watch returns come in.

King George VI, who must choose the next Prime Minister on the basis of this election, listened, like millions of his subjects, to returns broadcast by the BBC.

It was a battle of the two giants of British politics, and many Liberal candidates, lost in between, forfeited their £150 ($420) deposits put up for the privilege of running. A candidate had to score at least an eighth of the vote to get the money back.

Wild yells of jubilation went up in Conservative headquarters each time a report came in that the party had scored a switch and ousted a Labor member.

But Labor took cheer from first returns in industrial Manchester, a crucial battleground. There the Laborites took the first districts to report, and their majorites looked as good or better than in their landslide victory of 1945.

Most of the constituencies heard from were Labor strongholds.

The first switch gave a seat to E. E. Bullus, Conservative, by a majority of 7443 over Laborite Bernard Lewis. The vote was 22,430 to 14,987. This was in the Wembley North district of London.

The second overturn came in the Walton district of Liverpool, where James Haworth, the Laborite incumbent, was trounced by Conservative K. C. Thompson, 26,250 to 21,983. Haworth won his seat in 1945 with a majority of 2363 over the Conservative candidate.

Manchester's first three Laborite victors went in with majorities substantially the same as in 1945. In the last election, Manchester named nine Laborites and one Conservative.

The Conservatives struck again in the Wimbledon district of London, home of the famous tennis tournament.

Conservative C. W. Black nearly doubled the vote of Laborite George L. Deacon—40,339 to 20,296. In 1935 another member of the Labor Party won the seat from a Conservative by a 1368 margin.

Tens of thousands of Londoners packed movie houses, hotels and night clubs where special election night shows were in progress.

This island kingdom's 50,000 polling places closed at 9 p. m. (4 p. m., E. S. T. last night after an outpouring of voters which some estimates fixed at a record 26 million.

The Conservatives captured a fourth seat from Labor in the English Channel town of Gillingham. Conservative F. A. Burden knocked out Laborite Joseph Binns, a member of the old Parliament, by a vote of 20,504 to 18,424. In 1945 Binns carried the district by 1856.

In first returns from a London district, Labor held its seat from a mixed working and middle class district, Hammersmith South.

W. C. Williams, who won the constituency a year ago in a by-election, polled 18,825 to Conservative Anthony Fell's 16,161.

Williams increased his plurality over Fell, who was also a by-election opponent, from 1613 last year to 2664 this time.

The Liberal candidate, J. S. Ritter, got 1400.

Early returns indicated exceptionally heavy voting. Results for the first districts showed about 80 percent of those registered cast their votes, a near record for Britain. In the 1945 election about 73 percent of the electorate voted.

Labor retained two seats in Salford, industrial city adjoining Manchester.

Laborite Defeats One Of Two Red MP's

London (Friday) Feb. 24 (U.P.). Philip Piratin, one of the two Communist members of the last Parliament, was defeated for re-election by a Laborite today in the Stepheny district of London's East End.

Piratin ran third in a four-cornered race, polling only 5990 votes against 33,475 for Laborite W. J. Edwards. Lieut. Comdr. M. C. Solomon, Conservative, got 6238 and Liberal J. H. Maynard polled 2105.

In 1945, Piratin defeated a Laborite by about 2000 votes.

Nearly 100,000 Laid Off in Coal Strike

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Unemployment resulting from industrial shutdowns caused by the coal shortage headed for the 100,000 mark yesterday, as another day of coal contract negotiations failed to produce a change in the deadlock between the operators and the miners.

Ten States were reported to be taking emergency measures because of a critical coal shortage, and an increasing number of steel companies and other coal-consuming plants began to close down or reduce operations.

There was increasing pressure on the White House for mine-seizure action, and some preliminary steps along this line were taken on Capitol Hill. But President Truman held firm to the policy he announced last week: he'd sit tight while the situation was in the hands of the court.

Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court will hold a hearing at 10 a. m. today in proceedings against the United Mine Workers. The 370,000 soft coal miners have for two weeks refused to obey a "national emergency" injunction issued by Judge Keech temporarily banning the strike in the interest of national health and safety.

At the Statler Hotel, meanwhile, John L. Lewis and the operators conducted two more weary sessions—as ordered by the court—but failed to show any progress over the preceding 24 hours, according to David L. Cole, chairman of the President's fact-finding committee and the President's observer at the sessions. Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, who als attended yesterday's talks was equally discouraging. The talks will resume at 2:30 p. m. today.

The coal shortage hit the Sparrows Point, Md., plant of Bethlehem Steel Co. yesterday, when 1000 of the 19,000 employes were laid off.

Heaviest blow at employment and steel production fell around Pittsburgh, where Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. furloughed 12,500 workers at its Aliquippa plant, and initiated plans to let 12,500 other workers go at its Pittsburgh works tomorrow.

Inland Steel Co. reduced its operations by about half, laid off 500 workers, put 7000 others on part time. Republic Steel sent 850 employes home for the duration of the coal shortage.

Cuts in production and the working week were also undertaken or planned soon by Wheeling, Crucible, Sharon, Youngstown, Pittsburgh, and other steel companies. The reduce work week goes into effect on Monday at the Tennessee Coal, Iron Railroad Co., involving 12,000 employes. International Harvester has scheduled a three-day work week for 49,000 employes in Illinois and Indiana.

Violence flared up in various coal fields as UMW pickets sought to halt operations of non-union mines. G. Albert Stewart, an official of the Central Pennsylvania Open Pit Mining Association, appealed to Gov. James H. Duff for police reinforcements to end the "reign of terror" in the coal fields. "Only the strong arm of the law of the Commonwealth can avert civil war," Stewart said.

The operator's appeal came after pickets dynamited two coal loading docks at Brockway, Pa., damaging 20 homes and buildings. Three housewives were reported treated for shock and bruises.

Pickets hurled flaming gallon jugs of gasoline wrapped in rags on a coal pile at a surface mine near Murraysville, Pa. It was the fourth attack in 24 hours on the pit owned by the J. M. Hall Co. State police extinguished the fire before there was much damage.

Charles Dakon, a coal and ice service operator, charged at Grafton, W. Va., he was "taken for a ride" by armed pickets after standing them off at his home with a shotgun.

In southern West Virginia, 69 residents of Randolph County were indicted on charges of bodily injury or property damage in what the State held was a conspiracy last October, when pickets dumped coal trucks and beat up drivers during another phase of the coal contract battle.

Critical coal shortages and extraordinary measures to deal with the situation were reported in 10 States and the District: New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Ohio, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa.

Governor Frank Lausche, Ohio, informed the President that Ohio's coal supplies are "acutely scare." New York clamped a ban on the sale of soft coal except to high priority users.

On Capitol Hill, William Green, president of the AFL and a one-time official of the United Mine Workers, urged the President to seize the soft coal mines under his "inherent" powers. The President stated last week he does not believe he has such "inherent" authority.

A bill giving President Truman specific seizure power, along with Government seizure of coal mine profits, was introduced yesterday by Representative Cleveland M. Bailey (D., W. Va.). Representative Francis Case (R., S. Dak.) dropped another bill in the hopper "requesting" the President to ask the disputants to make a "special effort" to produce coal.

In Pittsburgh, district officials of the United Mine Workers agreed with local authorities on a plan to provide 2000 tons of coal a day for emergency use of hospitals and other essential operations.

Food Is 'Bait'

Reds Wooing Coal Strikers, Says Cvetic

By The Associated Press

Testimony indicating that 50 youth leaders of a Communist-front organization may be seeking to prolong the critical coal strike was laid before the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday.

Matthew Cvetic, of Pittsburgh, a former FBI undercover agent, said he had been informed two weeks ago that the alleged radicals were distributing food to the miners "as bait" while passing around copies of the Daily Worker, a Communist newspaper.

Cvetic said he was informed of these tactics by Bill Gordon, whom he identified as a Communist organizer.

The witness said Gordon told him that 50 emissaries of the Labor Youth League had been transported from New York to "work in the coal fields" spreading the party line.

Controlled by Communists

Cvetic said the Youth League was created and controlled by the Communist Party.

So far, he said, the Communists "have not made much progress" getting into key positions in John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers Union.

In Uniontown a UMW official confirmed Cvetic's statement concerning distribution of the Daily Worker to striking miners.

The official, Paul Terreta, president of the Isabella local at Weirton Coal Co., said miners in his territory usually refused to accept copies and the food that went with them.

Cvetic testified for the third day about serving seven years for the FBI within the Communist Party in Western Pennsylvania, unfolding a story of alleged Red plots for violent overthrow of the United States.

In his testimony yesterday, Cvetic told the lawmakers:

1. That Communist leader Steve Nelson constantly spoke of the United States as "the enemy."

2. That in the event of war with Russia, the Communist Party taught him it would be his job "to wage war against my own Government to the point of revolution and to overthrow it."

He said every Communist gets the same teachings.

3. That Radio Station WLOA at Braddock, Pa., has been used to broadcast scripts prepared by Communist leaders.

Cvetic said, however, that as far as he knows the people in charge of station WLOA are not Reds.

Cold Deepens Coal Crisis

bans Church on the cathedral grounds uses coal.

The First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., has "a couple of weeks' supply" a spokesman said. All Souls' (Unitarian) Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., has an adequate supply, a spokesman said.

Most large places of amusement and assembly will not be affected by the ban. Uline Arena, Turner's Arena and the National Guard Armory are heated by oil. Constitution Hall gets its heat from the Federal Government. The Jewish Community Center uses oil.

Less than 10 percent of the city's theaters — and none of the big downtown movie houses—will be affected by the ban, according to A. Julian Brylawski, president of the Theater Owners Association.

Purpose of cutting the ration to office buildings, Kennedy said, was to try to save some coal for the "so-called nonessential industries like dress shops and auto repair shops" which have the lowest commercial priority. The District doesn't want to put some of them out of business just because they burn coal instead of oil, he said.

After making a tour of office buildings yesterday, Kennedy stated some are not cooperating with the drive to save coal. In one building the thermometer read 76 degrees, he said.

There now appears to be only six or seven days' supply of soft coal in the dealers' bins, Kennedy said. He emphasized the necessity of conserving by stating again that it will be a week after the strike ends before any substantial amounts of coal reach the District.

Patrick A. Deck, chairman of the coal division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said a little coal is dribbling into the city, but the situation is "very bad."

There was still no decision yesterday on rationing coal to District Government institutions. The Commissioners last night had not received an answer to their telegram asking how much coal they could count on from the Federal Government. It appeared, however, from previous statements that there was no immediate need to close schools or other District buildings.

Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning said schools will be open today, and as far as he knew they would also be open Monday. He said he is operating on a day-to-day basis.

Meanwhile, there were these developments in nearby areas:

Superintendent of Schools Edwin W. Broome said all Montgomery County night school classes, except those held in Leland Junior High School, will be suspended March 1. All other night activities in the county's coal-using schools were also ordered halted as of that date. There was no immediate decision as to what Montgomery Junior College — which holds some of its regular classes at night—would do.

In Alexandria, Emergency Coal Committee Chairman Francis H. Fannon, said the city's five dealers ran out of coal yesterday. However, five carloads released by State officials are expected Saturday.

Green Assails Proposal to Curb Labor Under Antitrust Laws

By The Associated Press

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday denounced a bill to make labor unions subject to the anti-trust laws. He told Congress it would "add to the mischievous effects of Government by injunction."

Senator Robertson (D., Va.), sponsor of the bill, has said the measure is intended to curb the "monopolistic powers" of John L. Lewis, chief of the United Mine Workers Union. Robertson has been particularly critical of the three-day workweek Lewis ordered for coal miners prior to the present full-scale coal strike.

Robertson's view is that the three-day week would be illegal, as a restraint on trade, if unions were subject to anti-trust laws.

Green testified before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee which is studying the Robertson measure.

He argued the three-day work week was not the result "of any effort to fix or control prices," as Robertson has contended.

"It (the curtailed week) resulted temporarily from the efforts of the miners to obtain a contract and protect and improve their wages and conditions of employment," Green said.

In an obvious reference to the coal strike, Green told the subcommittee that "if we find that collective bargaining has not worked in a particular situation, the answer does not lie in destroying the collective bargaining process. He added:

"Let us not adopt the methods of totalitarianism just because the methods of a free society do not appear to function effectively in one particular situation."

Green said the AFL is unalterably opposed to the Robertson Bill. He said its basic fallacy is that it fails to take into account that "the labor of a human being is not an article or commodity of commerce."

Phone Rate Boost Sought

on a per phone basis rather than as a group.

Principal items in the proposed tariffs are:

Residential — Individual line $4.75 to $5.25; two-party line, $4 to $4.50; individual line with allowance of 50 messages, $3.75 to $4.25; two-party line with message unit allowance cut from 45 to 40, $2.25 to $2.75. Messages over allowance remain at 4½ cents each.

Business — Individual line with 100 messages, $6 to $6.50; additional message units stay at 5 cents for first 100, 4 cents for second 100 and then rise from 3¼ cents to 3½ cents for additional ones.

75-Cent Increase

Individual line with trunk message rate (available only to present subscribers) with allowance of 50 messages, $3.75 to $4.50, additional messages change from the present plan of 5 cents for the first 150 and then 4 cents each to 5 cents straight.

Two-party line with allowance of 40 messages (available only to subscribers who had this service on January 11, 1948), $3.25 to $3.75, additional messages remain at 5 cents each.

Individual line, semipublic with 80 messages, $3.25 to $3.75; additional messages remain at 5 cents; auxiliary line and station, $2.25 to $2.50; additional PBX trunk, $1.75 to $2.50.

PBX systems—Key switchboards with seven stations and three trunks, $4 to $5; with 12 stations and 5 trunks, $5 to $7; nonmultiple cord switchboards with 40 lines or less station capacity, $7 to $10 per position; with 41 to 80 line station capacity, $10 to $15; with 81 to 320 line station capacity, $15 to $20.

Multiple Switchboards

Multiple switchboards—Dial systems with 3200 lines or less and manual systems 1700 lines or less using standard features only, $20 to $30; same with single flashing recall added, $20 to $35.

Dial systems of over 3200 lines and manual systems over 1700 lines with idle trunk lamp indicator added, $20 to $40; with idle trunk lamp indicator and single flashing recall added, $20 to $45; with idle trunk lamp indicator, audible ringing, machine ringing and double flashing recall added, $20 to $55.

Dial switching equipment—selectors, connectors and selector-connectors, $2 to $2.50; line finders, $1 to $2.50.

Manual key station systems, 12-button key sets, $1 to $1.25 each. The rates for 24 and 36-button key sets would be withdrawn in the proposed tariff.

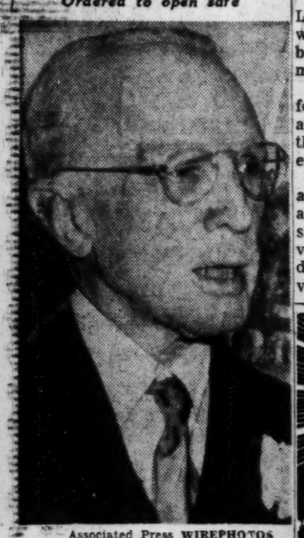
Cleveland Robbers Get $350,000 Gems

Millionaire's Wife Slugged by Bandits

MRS. WILLIAM MATHER
Ordered to open safe



Associated Press WIREPHOTOS
WILLIAM G. MATHER
Slept through robbery

Cleveland, Feb. 23 (AP).—Wearing stockings on their shoes and hoods over their heads, seven gunmen got an estimated $35,000 in uninsured jewels today in a slick hold-up at the William G. Mather mansion.

But Mather himself, 93-year-old retired board chairman of Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co. and a millionaire many times over, slept on as his wife screamed and his Irish terrier, Pokey, barked.

The robbers discovered where the jewels were by waking Mrs. Mather, 60-year-old socialite, with the gleam of a flashlight's beam. The leader swatted her on the face with the butt of a machine gun.

Before they left, both Mrs. Mather and Mather's male nurse, roused by her screams, were bound and gagged with adhesive tape and tied in a sitting position to her bed. The nurse is 72-year-old Walter Mussell.

A few hours later, Mrs. Mather appeared surprisingly calm after her ordeal.

"The jewelry was not insured," she said. "It has mostly a sentimental value. I am confident the police will solve this."

Police Chief William R. L'Estrange of suburban Bratenahl, where the Mathers live, said the bandits seemed suspiciously familiar with the premises.

He has obtained the names of four or five former Mather servants because the bandits got into the home through the servants' entrance.

L'Estrange thinks the men used a passkey. He also kept the FBI advised but the FBI office here said it could make no formal investigation unless there was evidence a Federal law had been violated.

Ewing Reports Aid to Hospitals

Hospitals and health centers in the United States have received 210 million dollars of Federal funds through Public Health Service in the past 25 months.

Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security administrator, announced the total last night in summary of his agency's hospital construction and planning activities.

swept the transfer orders without official announcement, without official explanation.

So unexpected were the orders that Night Police Superintendent William Cunningham was assigned the "special delivery messenger" assignment of handing the orders to the three captains at their homes.

They were to take effect this morning.

Richitt Is First

The first to receive the transfer order was Captain Richitt. He got his around 6:30 p. m. Next was Captain Sullivan. He got his about 7 p. m. Fondahl was the last to get his orders.

By 11:30 p. m. the three had been notified that the orders were cancelled.

Barrett could not be reached for comment.

The abortive shakeup was the first ordered since 117 police officers were transferred by Barrett's New Year's Day transfer list.

Sullivan Moved From 12th

Neither Captain Richitt nor Captain Fondahl had been affected by the New Year transfers. Captain Sullivan had been moved from the Twelfth to the Second Precinct in a trade of assignments with Capt. Clyde N. Strange.

The third precinct, including the White Houe within its boundaries, is regarded as one of the choice precinct command posts. Captain Richitt last fall was the only Metropolitan Police officer other than Major Barrett to go with President Truman to his vacation in Key West.

Christoffel Found Guilty

House committee on March 1, 1947, during an investigation of charges that Communists instigated a lengthy wartime strike at Allis-Chalmers in an effort to cripple vital United States war production.

Under oath, he repeatedly denied to the committee that he was or ever had been a Communist, an active Communist sympathizer, or an associate of Communist leaders.

Christoffel, his hands clasped behind his back and a blank expression on his face, stood while the jury was polled at the insistence of Defense Counsel O. John Rogge.

He heard the word "guilty" intoned 60 times — once by each juror on each of the five counts.

Letts had given the jurors the case with a 65-minute charge in which he outlined two main issues in the trial: (1) Whether Christoffel actually was a Communist; and (2) whether a quorum of the House committee was "physically" present when he testified.

Rogge said he will file motions asking the judge to set aside the verdict on grounds of insufficient evidence, or failing that, for a new trial.

Christoffel's original bond was put up by the American Civil Rights Congress.

Truman Keeps Loyalty File

on his 1948 directive against surrendering confidential files bearing on the loyalty of Government workers.

"A subpena would make no difference?" a reporter asked.

No. Mr. Truman replied, and added: How are you going to serve a subpena on the President of the United States? Who is going to enforce it?

A reporter, trying for a laugh, asked whether he was "protected by the Constitution or by the Secret Service."

By the Government of the United States, Mr. Truman answered. He said he hoped the reporter remembered what happened in the administration of Andrew Jackson. He then recalled what President Jackson said about a Chief Justice: the Chief Justice has made his decision, now let's see him enforce it.

In the winter of 1948, the House Committee on Un-American Activities tried to get the loyalty files of Dr. E. U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards. Averill Harriman, then Secretary of Commerce and Condon's superior, refused to give up the files.

Ten days later, on March 15, President Truman issued a memorandum to all officials in the Executive branch to reject "any subpena or demand" from Congress or the courts for material in the loyalty program files.

Mr. Truman said then that the documents had to be kept confidential "in the interest of our national security and welfare." Failure to do so, he implied, would wreck the loyalty investigation procedure.

Any request for the data in the loyalty files of any department should be referred to the White House, Mr. Truman said in the '48 directive. He added that he would determine the action to be taken in each particular case.

Senator McCarthy amplified his charges against the State Department in a speech on the Senate floor Tuesday night. On Wednesday, Democratic Floor Leader Lucas called for a showdown by asking for an investigation by the Foreign Relations Committee.

After long and angry debate, Republicans persuaded Lucas to agree that the committee be directed to "procure by subpena" the loyalty files of accused State Department employes.

Lucas, in agreeing to the subpena idea, indicated that President Truman and other officials of the Executive Branch might refuse to surrender the files.

After Mr. Truman had talked to reporters yesterday, Senator McCarthy said he didn't think "the Senate will allow the President to get away with this boyish thumbing of his nose at all of the Senators who represent the 48 states."

Senator Wherry accused Mr. Truman of challenging the Senate's right "to see the records of the State Department that are necessary for the Senate to discharge its constitutional duties."

Then, calling for a showdown in the courts if necessary, he said:

"It is in the public interest that the President make available these files, and he should not hide behind any pretense that the records of employes are secret and can be withheld from Congress."

Motorist Fined $475 On 3 Traffic Counts

Harry W. Jenkins, 34, of Gaithersburg, Md., was fined a total of $475 on three traffic counts yesterday in Rockville Police Court.

Judge Arthur C. Bready imposed fines of $250 or six months in jail for drunk driving; $125 or 10 days for reckless driving, and $100 or 60 days for driving on a revoked permit. Jenkins was arrested February 13 on Route 28 near Rockville.

Repeal Withholding Tax, Byrnes Urges

James F. Byrnes says Congress "must rise to its full stature and put a stop to crisis government when there is no crisis."

Writing in the current issue of Collier's, the former Secretary of State and candidate for Governor of South Carolina, advocates cutting taxes wherever possible as the first step toward ending "crisis government."

Lower tax revenues, he argues, would be an inducement to decrease Federal spending. Congressmen could say to their constituents and to department officials pressing for appropriations, "Sorry. We do not have the money and we are afraid to run a deficit any bigger than the one we have now."

Byrnes also favors elimination of the withholding tax. He said it is neither sound nor honest to give the taxpayer a "mild anesthetic" while his money is being taken from him.

He adds the average worker knows only about his take-home pay and doesn't fully realize he is paying several hundred dollars a year to the Government.

If, like others, he had to pay quarterly installments out of the money he had aalready taken home, Byrnes predicts, Federal appropriations would be reduced several billions of dollars.

'Pay Own Way'

Co-ops Call Tax Benefits Exaggerated

Former Representative Jerry Voorhis (D., Calif.) said yesterday the tax benefits held by cooperatives have been much exaggerated by groups seeking their repeal.

Voorhis, now executive secretary of the Cooperative League of the United States, testified before the House Ways and Means Committee. It is studying President Truman's "package" tax revision program, including measures to close "loopholes" in Federal revenue laws.

The alleged tax advantages of cooperatives "vanish into thin air in the light of the real facts," he said. Such enterprises are required to pay "a full Federal income tax" on any earnings treated as profits and used for expansion, he declared. Stockholders, he added, must pay taxes on cooperative dividends just as on corporate dividens.

Donald Kirkpatrick, general counsel of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said his organization is "aggressively opposed to any effort to tax farmer cooperatives on savings and earnings returned as cash."

Karl D. Loos, representing several farmer cooperatives, said the Government would gain "less than $20,000,000 a year" by wiping out all present income tax exemptions granted farmer cooperatives.

U. S. Aide Hits Tax Privileges For Shipping

A member of the U. S. Maritime Commission told a Senate committee yesterday that this is no time to grant special tax privileges to the maritime industry.

Commissioner Raymond S. McKeough said he fears ship operators will lose what Federal subsidies they already have if the burden on the Treasury becomes too heavy.

McKeough opposed the "whole cocept" of pending legislation providing for tax concessions designed to stimulate ship construction and reconversion. He said it will not accomplish its objective.

He urged the Senate Commerce Subcommittee on Merchant Marine, headed by Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.), to take the time for a careful analysis of all the problems of the industry before making any drastic changes in the 1936 Merchant Marine Act.

McKeough said American ship owners, in both the domestic and foreign trade, have plenty of ships from war-built surplus.

McKeough had three suggestions for assisting shipping:

1. Tell the armed services to quit competing with commercial ships. He said the Navy is operating 38 tankers.
2. Try again for congressional approval of 25 million dollars to rehabilitate 134 high priority ships in the reserve fleet.
3. Suggest to the President and the State Department that an international conference be held to consider an agreement "to desist from overtonnage" on the world's sea lanes.

The Time The Anti-Trust Lawyers Killed Their Own Case!

For ten years the anti-trust lawyers have been attacking the business methods that make it possible to give the public the best quality food at the lowest prices.

In our last ad we told you how Federal Judge W. H. Atwell, at Dallas, threw the anti-trust lawyers and all their inflammatory charges against A&P right out of his court.

But the anti-trust lawyers were not satisfied with decisions against them by three federal judges.

They still wanted to destroy A&P.

They Appealed to New Orleans

So they appealed Judge Atwell's decision to the three-judge Circuit Court at New Orleans.

One of the three, Judge Curtis L. Waller, agreed with Judge Atwell that the case should be dismissed.

The other two members of the Circuit Court, Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson, Jr., and Judge Allen Cox, although saying the case should be tried, agreed that the indictment was vague and contained many allegations which were inflammatory.

They decided that Judge Atwell at Dallas should protect A&P from these inflammatory allegations and could order the anti-trust lawyers to supply the defendants with a bill of particulars.

So the case was back in Dallas again.

Judge Atwell, carrying out the decision of the Circuit Court, struck out the inflammatory matter.

He said that without this inflammatory and prejudicial matter the Grand Jury might never have returned the indictment.

Judge Atwell said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"There are many statements in the indictment which are not at all in violation, and are highly prejudicial and inflammatory."

The anti-trust lawyers objected. They advanced an amazing argument. They said that the removal of their inflammatory allegations (which all four judges had agreed did not belong in the indictment) destroyed their case.

Judge Atwell instructed the anti-trust lawyers to furnish the court with a bill of particulars. In short, he wanted specific charges instead of vague generalities. He set the deadline for furnishing this material at January 15th, 1944.

When the anti-trust lawyers twice asked for more time, pleading sickness among their staff, Judge Atwell extended the time to February 25th because he believed that they were honestly trying, in good faith, to prepare the material he had requested.

Actually, it developed, they were using the time to get ready to drop the case in Dallas and start it in another court.

They Quit in Dallas

On February 26th, while the judge was still waiting for his answer, and without any previous notice to him, the anti-trust lawyers gave a story to the newspapers in Washington, announcing that they were dropping the case in Dallas.

They said that it was their intention "to file a substantially similar suit in an appropriate jurisdiction at an early date."

The "early date" turned out to be the same day.

As soon as one anti-trust lawyer killed the case in Dallas, another anti-trust lawyer filed a new case in Danville, Illinois. This new case made most of the same allegations that had been made and dropped in Dallas; and that are being made against us today.

So now, according to the anti-trust lawyers, all four judges who had ruled on the Dallas case were wrong.

Despite defeats in three federal courts in widely separated parts of the country, they continued their campaign to destroy A&P.

When Judge Atwell heard of their action he ordered the anti-trust lawyers to prepare an order for his signature dismissing the Dallas case.

In signing this order he said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"This nolle prosequi does not have the sanction or approval of this court. That is not necessary, nor that the government ask for the court's approval.

"It is, however, a matter that may be presented to the other court and may be of interest to the people at large."

So after their efforts to destroy A&P had failed in Washington, D. C., Wilson, North Carolina, and Dallas, Texas, the anti-trust lawyers moved on to Danville, Illinois.

They were still determined to destroy this company which had brought more and better food at lower cost to millions of American families.

They Were Wrong Three Times Before!

Three times the anti-trust lawyers went into federal courts and made serious and damaging charges against A&P.

Three times federal judges said the anti-trust lawyers were wrong and rendered decisions against them.

In previous ads in this series we told you about these other anti-trust "cases" involving us, which the judges said were not cases at all.

We think you should know about these previous cases, because once again the anti-trust lawyers are making damaging "allegations" that could seriously affect our business if they were believed by the public.

There was the time in Washington, D. C., when they said we and other good American citizens conspired to fix the price of bread in that city.

This was the time Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough ruled that A&P and the other defendants did not even need to put in a defense. He instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty".

It was the time Judge Goldsborough said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"If you were to show this record to any experienced trial lawyer in the world, he would tell you that there was not any evidence at all.

"Honestly, I have never in my over forty years' experience seen tried a case that was as absolutely devoid of evidence as this. That is the honest truth. I have never seen one like it."

There was the time in Wilson, North Carolina, they said we and other good American citizens conspired to fix prices paid farmers for their potatoes.

This was the time Federal Judge C. C. Wyche directed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty".

It was the time Judge Wyche said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"In my opinion there is no testimony proauced from which it can reasonably be inferred that the defendants entered into a combination to depress or lower the price of potatoes.

"I might say that I never tried a case in my life where a greater effort, more work, more investigation had been done, combing almost with a fine-tooth comb to gather evidence.

"But, as was said a long time ago, you can't make brick without straw, and you can't make a case without facts."

There was the time in Dallas, Texas, when they made practically the same "allegations" they are making today.

This was the time Federal Judge W. H. Atwell ruled that the case should not even be tried. He said that the indictment contained inflammatory statements that he would not permit to be presented to a jury.

It was the time Judge Atwell said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"I know of no American rule, and I wish I had the power to underscore the word 'American,' which permits us to try a man because of his size.

"If I thought I was presiding over a court and that I might have to sentence some person because he was a great big fellow, or because he was a Lilliputian, I would feel like resigning. God knows we don't want it ever to occur in America that the size is going to determine whether a man is guilty or innocent."

"Didn't seem possible that clothes could turn out so clean, without rinsing. It's No-Rinse Surf for me—from now on!"

—Mrs. Arthur McManus, Philadelphia, Pa.

no-rinse Surf now-actually guarantees world's cleanest wash-with no rinsing!

Cuts my washing time and work in half!

"No-Rinse Surf is a huge time-saver! Colors come out clear and bright—my towels are softer, too!"

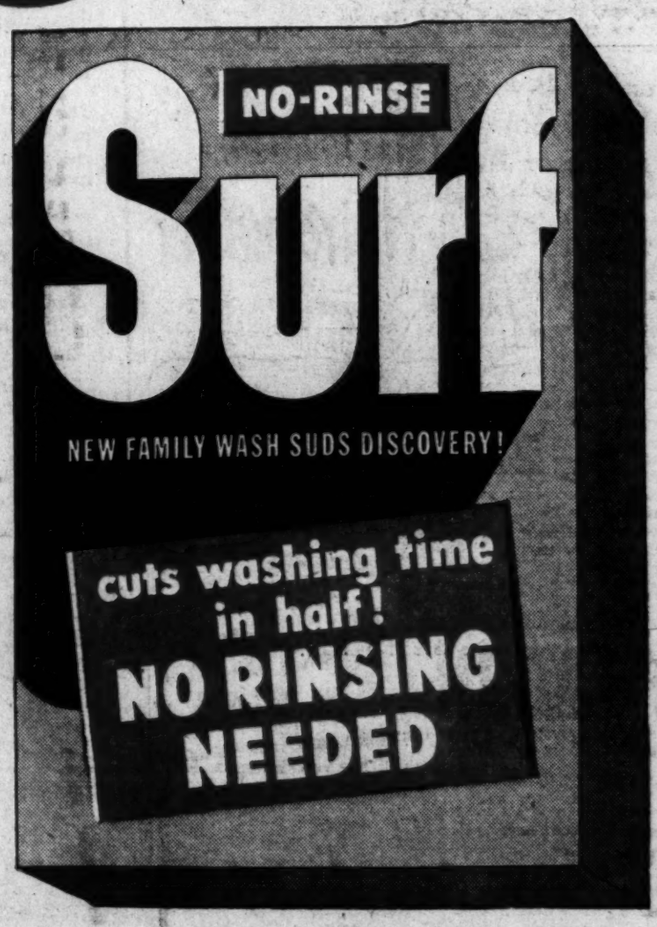
—Mrs. Ruth Lee, Chicago, Illinois

Yes, it's true! It's a miracle! Amazing No-Rinse Surf guarantees to get your clothes cleaner than any soap, any suds—without any rinsing at all!

Yes, after five years of research, Lever Laboratories discovered a miracle ingredient that floats dirt away. Just take your wash right from the tub and run it through the wringer or spin-drier. The dirt wrings out with Surf-suds. Clothes come white—bright—wonder-clean! Need no bluing, no bleach!

Safe? No-Rinse Surf has been approved by the United States Testing Company. Results prove it actually helps clothes wear longer. Leaves them cleaner than if washed with ordinary suds and rinsed twice.

What's more, you'll find your wash dries soft and sweet—irons like a dream. Clothes won't turn yellow or gray. Try No-Rinse Surf—once—and save half the time and work of washday. You'll never go back to rinsing again!



See for yourself with No-Rinse Surf!

1. Cuts washing time and work in half!
2. Clothes come whiter—colors brighter!
3. Actually helps clothes wear longer!
4. Wash dries sweet and soft!
5. Clothes iron like a dream!

OR TRIPLE YOUR MONEY BACK! If you are not completely satisfied, return unused portion in package to Lever Brothers Co., 80 Varick Street, New York 13, N. Y., and triple the purchase price, plus postage, will be refunded.

3 Television Systems Show Their Colors

Laurel, Md., Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Three color television systems staged a sweepstakes for recognition today, and two came out claiming their products were winners. The third said it would outshine the others if given another chance.

The event was a series of exhaustive tests by the Federal Communications Commission, which is trying to decide which color video system is best and whether to give it to the public now.

The Columbia Broadcasting System, Radio Corporation of America and Color Television, Inc., strutted their singers, hula dancers and soap flake boxes across 17 television receivers, some showing up in color and others in black and white.

Frank Stanton, CBS president, said the tests "definitely establish the superiority of the Columbia system of color television."

Dr. C. B. Jolliffe, RCA executive vice president, said his product alone offered "high-definition pictures, unlimited picture size and brightness, and flickerless pictures with no color break-up or fringing."

But CTI didn't fare so well. Because of power overloads, transformers in three of its receivers blew out. President Arthur S. Matthews said he will ask the FCC to give it another chance by itself in the next two weeks.

The FCC said nothing for the moment. Its experts will have to go over the results and compare notes, besides deciding whether to give CTI another chance, before ruling which system is best.

Air Antenna Zone Hearing Set March 8

An amendment of District zoning regulations to permit television and FM radio stations to transmit from sites in residential areas will be considered by the zoning commission March 8.

Whether this is permitted under existing regulations had been in question until yesterday. The District Commissioners then approved an opinion by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West that it is not.

Zoning regulations were changed several years ago with the advent of television to allow construction of antenna towers in residential areas. This was done because most high ground needed for such installations was zoned residential.

The proposed change would provide that broadcasts may originate from transmitter sites, but that there shall be no studio audience present.

Hearing on the proposed amendment was ordered by the Zoning Commission after an inquiry from a television station, according to Robert O. Clouser, the commission's executive officer. The March 8 meeting is the first of the commission's three regular meetings this year.

Rubber Plants Sale Opposed By Oil Official

R. C. Jopling, vice president of Phillips Petroleum Co., yesterday sharply criticized President Truman's plan for selling Government-owned synthetic rubber plants. He said it would foster a big company monopoly.

Jopling testified before the House Armed Services committee which is considering an administration bill to authorize sale of the war-built plants to private firms.

He said the proposed sales would be hedged with so many restrictions in the name of national security that only the four biggest rubber companies could afford to buy the plants.

The same companies, he asserted, already "control 88 percent" of the rubber industry.

Jopling asked that the bill be drastically revised. He said sale of the plants should be carried out in a way that will encourage participation by small rubber companies and firms, like his own, which are not primarily engaged in manufacturing.

Graziani Denies He's Assassin or Deporter of Men

Rome, Feb. 23 (AP).—Marshal Rodolfo Graziani told an Italian military tribunal today he acted simply as a soldier in serving as Benito Mussolini's war minister in the last days of World War II.

"I am not an assassin or an indiscriminate murderer or a deporter of men, but simply a soldier," the grizzled veteran declared at his second trial on charges of aiding the Nazis.

Five generals and one admiral make up the court. A civilian court disqualified itself last year after a turbulent, five-month hearing. Graziani, 66, and ailing, has been in custody since 1945. He testified he yielded to German pressure to go north with Mussolini's puppet government "only when I was made aware that Italy faced a fate sim-

Stormy Debate Greets Maryland House Hearing on World Government Repealer

Annapolis, Feb. 23 (AP).—An explosive committee hearing on whether Maryland should reverse its stand for world government delayed the convening of the House of Delegates 29 minutes today.

More than 100 friends and foes of world federation, still locked in debate, cleared out of the House chamber half an hour after delegates were to take their seats.

Clubwomen, veterans and one-world spokesmen swarmed to testify before the House judiciary committee on a resolution which would repeal two almost-forgotten actions of the Maryland General Assembly.

Seven years ago the Legislature resolved to favor creation of "a commonwealth of nations to be known as the Federation of the World." World government "apprehends the entire human race as one family," the 1943 resolution said.

Last year the legislature passed a resolution calling for a commission "to study the advisability of the State of Maryland urging the United States to take the initiative in strengthening the United Nations Organization." Governor Lane has yet to appoint the commission.

The resolutions "put Maryland in the wrong light," said Delegate Burch (D., Prince Georges), a real estate agent from Hitching Post Hill. He introduced eight days ago a resolution to repeal the previous resolutions and to declare Maryland "is definitely opposed" to world government.

Meanwhile, the Senate refused to throw Governor Lane's appropriations bill back into committee today and set the stage for a final vote on that $144,203,000 measure.

Before doing so, Senators rejected an amendment that would have wiped out the State's $147,665 gift to the counties to pay half the salaries of tax assessors.

It would have "torn down the entire tax structure" of the State, Majority Leader Sothoron (D., Prince Georges) charged.

Setting up the giant spending bill for its decisive vote, probably Friday, the Senate did accept one minor amendment that had been offered yesterday by Sothoron. It would add only $720 to the proposed 1951 budget, raising the total to $143,066,772.

Although kept alive, the sales tax bill was held over until Monday night. Openly opposed by the administration, it would cut revenues by sums estimated as high as $3,500,000.

The Lane-supported tax relief measures completed their trip through the Legislature at a short House session and went to the Governor for signature.

They would increase from $400 to $600 the reduction allowed for dependents of Marylanders in the upper income brackets and lower from 5 to 2 percent the rate on small annuities and dividends.

With a companion bill already before the Governor, the dependents' measure would save taxpayers an estimated $989,000. The investment income slash for persons who make no more than $10,000 a year would mean $159,000 under the same estimate.

Appeal to Voters Hinted In Maryland U. Fund Fight

Annapolis, Feb. 23 (AP).—Dr. H. C. Byrd charged today that uninformed people were trying to dictate to the University of Maryland and he might seek support from the public at large.

The university president attacked a bill to require that money received from student fees and special charges in excess of estimates be handed back to the State treasury. It would have to be reappropriated by the General Assembly to be spent by the university.

"Confiscation," Byrd called the proposal by Delegate Bandiere (D., Balto 5th).

Any efficiency in administration of the university is due to all the restrictions set up by the State, he charged.

"The position I may have to take is to submit this whole thing to the people of this State, and it may be this fall," Byrd told the House Ways and Means Committee.

He suggested Bandiere "did not know the extent" of his bill when it was introduced.

Yesterday, the University of Maryland asked authority to erect 16 buildings and to raise its own money for them.

The Legislature was asked today to create a building authority at the university. The board of regents would be members of the authority which would have complete and independent control over the buildings and their financing. The State would have to contribute nothing except land.

The bill to create the authority was introduced by Senator Beck (R., Caroline). It would authorize construction at College Park of a combination physical education, auditorium and indoor athletics building; three dormitories; 10 other housing units for fraternities and sororities, and a general recreation building at Baltimore.

The buildings and bonds to finance them would be tax exempt.

Legislator Urges More State Offices

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Feb. 23.—A proposal to center more State office buildings in Annapolis as soon as the Chesapeake Bay Bridge and proposed highways are completed was advanced here today.

Senator Louis L. Goldstein (D., Calvert County) made the suggestion at a Senate Finance Committee hearing in questioning State Comptroller James J. Lacy on a recent transfer of income tax offices from Annapolis to Baltimore.

Lacy said that the State now pays $453,823 in office rent annually in leased space for its offices. Senator Goldstein pointed out that with two million dollars already appropriated but not used for consolidation of Baltimore State offices, and with perhaps a 15-year bond issue, the State might well proceed with building one or two buildings in Annapolis to house State functions there.

The discussion came up after Lacy had been subjected to blistering questioning by Senators Paul J. Bailey (R., St. Marys County) and William F. Stromyer (D., Anne Arundel County) on the tax office move.

Lacy said he had not made the transfer until he had cleared legal angles with Attorney General Hall Hammond and received authority from the public works board. Lacy said the move was practical, an "unquestionable" saving to the State in economy and efficiency.

Senator Stromyer called the new Baltimore office a "disgrace to the State of Maryland" and "nothing but a loft."

Senator Bailey, who had pushed for the Senate Finance Committee hearing on the transfer, lost by a 7-to-5 vote on his motion to have the General Assembly's chief investigating committee probe legality of the transfer. Bailey's proposal was for the group to investigate whether the constitution of Maryland had been violated in the move. The constitution requires that the general offices of the State comptroller be situated in Annapolis.

Tenants in Alley Move Out; So D. C. Drops Charges

Charges against seven persons who had continued to live in condemned houses in Bell's ct., Georgetown, yesterday were dropped in Municipal Court when it was shown the defendants had moved.

The trial of an eighth person, Snow Kelley, 1526 Bell's ct., nw., on similar charges was continued until February 27.

In Landlord and Tenants Court, Judge Ellen K. Raedy issued eviction orders to 14 families living in six different NCHA housing developments on the grounds that their incomes exceeded the legal limit for occupancy.

State-Supervised Assessing Bill Voted

Richmond, Va., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Virginia Senate today passed and sent to the House the bill giving the State supervision of county real estate assessments, but only for the purpose of determining whether a county should share in State funds to equalize educational and other opportunities.

The State may make the assessments available to the county but cannot require the local authorities to use it for tax purposes. It will merely be a yardstick by which the State can determine the local tax effort and decide whether the county should share in State funds appropriated especially to aid localities with small taxable values.

Controversial Bill

The measure, sponsored by Senators Gray, Bird and Norris, was the most important and most controversial of the many bills recommended by the Tax Study Commission.

The Senate took up out of order and passed the administration bill supplement the 45-million-dollar from the sinking fund to the literary fund where it will be available for loans to counties and cities for school construction. Governor Battle recommended this to supplement the 45 million dollar school construction program already passed. The bill now goes to the House.

In other major actions today:

The Senate recommitted to the finance committee the House bill to prohibit cities, towns and counties from levying a tax on radio and television broadcasting. It will be heard Friday morning.

Truck Bill Killed

The House roads committee killed the Edmunds and Purcell bills to increase the weight limits for motor carriers. A similar bill has been killed by the Senate roads committee. The committee also killed the Guy bill prohibiting television sets visible to the automobile driver, but such a provision is carried in another bill.

The House beat down an amendment to a bill which would have reduced the tax on wholesale merchants from 20 to 13 cents per hundred.

The House appropriattions committee reported favorably on the American Legion-sponsored bill for a "living war memorial" in the form of a building in Richmond with an auditorium to house the State military department and veterans' organizations.

Annexation Suit Blocks Fairfax Bonds

Fairfax County's proposed $10,500,000 school bond issue came to a standstill last night, with the school board agreeing that its hands were tied legally.

School Superintendent W. T. Woodson told the board that Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh and the board's own attorney, John Alexander, believed Falls Church's annexation suit will make a bond issue illegal.

Under State law, both attorneys pointed out, permanent public improvements cannot be contracted by a county between the time a city wins part of the county's territory through court action and the time court makes the annexation effective.

That's the think that killed it, declared School Board Chairman F. W. Robinson.

"It looks like our hands are tied," Board Member C. N. Cockrell added.

"It's all over but the shouting," said another board member, Clarence B. Jett.

The board last night had hoped to begin work on a resolution asking Fairfax County Circuit Court to set up a referendum on the bond issue. The board has on hand well over the 2000 signatures on a petition necessary for such a referendum.

It then decided, after hearing the attorneys' opinions, to seek further legal counsel. Marsh and Alexander gave their opinion in a letter to the Board. It said in part: "It has come to our attention through The Washington Post . . . that on February 20, Falls Church city council adopted an annexation ordinance and instructed its attorneys to promptly file the annexation suit."

"It is our opinion that the legality of a bond issue, based on a referendum taken during the pendency of such litigation, would be highly questionable."

The board directed that Marsh take to court the $240,000 argument that the county claims Falls Church owes it. Fairfax contends the money is the city's share of the county's $2,400,000 school bond indebtedness—incurred before Falls Church became an independent city.

Church Stages Dinner

Forestville Methodist Church will serve a ham and fried oyster dinner at the Grange Hall, Forestville, Va., from 2:30 to 8 p. m. Saturday.

B'nai B'rith Mardi Gras

Argo Lodge No. 413, B'nai B'rith, will hold a Mardi Gras Sunday beginning at 5 p. m. in the Hotel 2400.

Falls Church Files Annexation Suit

Falls Church's latest annexation suit to annex 10.75 square miles of adjoining Fairfax County land was filed yesterday in Fairfax Circuit Court.

The City Council had previously approved the annexation ordinance, which asks for a somewhat smaller chunk of county land than that requested in annexation proceedings last summer.

Next step in the current annexation action will be the request by Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul Brown for appointment of a special three-judge annexation court by the chief justice of the Virginia Supreme Court.

Perlman Depicts U. S. As Enforcer of Rights

The Federal Government has taken a new role in civil liberties —adding the sword to the shield, Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman declared last night.

The most significant development in civil rights has been the emergence of a concept stated two years ago by President Truman, Perlman said. This was:

"The Federal Government has a clear duty to see that constitutional guaranties of individual liberties and of equal protection under the laws are not denied or abridged anywhere in our Union."

Lists Steps Taken

Speaking to the National Civil Liberties Clearing House at the Hotel 2400, Perlman listed steps taken under this policy to narrow the gap "between our preachments and practices."

The first was the appointment of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, which prepared a report "now recognized as one of the great documents in the history of liberty."

Next came the President's request to Congress for legislation establishing a Permanent Commission on Civil Rights, protection against lynching, abolition of poll taxes, creation of FEPC, prohibition of discrimination in inter-State transportation facilities and enactment of a modern civil rights law in Washington.

"There cannot be any doubt whatsoever as to their ultimate enactment," the Solicitor General emphasized.

In his own office, "the new concept of Governmental leadership in protecting civil rights led to the taking of several unprecedented actions before the Supreme Court," Perlman said.

The Justice Department filed briefs in restrictive covenant cases before the Supreme Court and next month will appear before the Court in the Henderson case involving segregation on railroad dining cars. He reminded that in the latter case, the department was asked by the Interstate Commerce Commission to join in a motion asking the Supreme Court to dismiss the case. Instead, the Solicitor General declined and said further that if the Commission filed it, he would "oppose it on behalf of the United States. The motion was not filed," Perlman reported.

Defends Wiretapping

Perlman defended the Federal loyalty program and wiretapping as measures taken reluctantly which had "been found imperative by those who have the grave responsibility of protecting the Nation from disaster." He said such devices "should be hedged with restrictions designed to prevent abuse."

After his speech, several delegates to the convention questioned the stand on wiretapping. Former Attorney General Francis Biddle, who chaired the dinner meeting, sided with Perlman in a view that wiretapping was not illegal. Biddle recommended proper controls.

The conference continues today at 9 a. m. at the Hotel 2400.

Javits Backs Mid-Income Housing Bill

Two New York Representatives yesterday called for strong support for a middle-income cooperative housing bill now pending in Congress.

The statements came at the opening of a two-day conference at the Washington Hotel of 25 national religious, veterans, labor and cooperative organizations.

Representative Jacob K. Javits (D., N. Y.) said the bill would permit construction of 200,000 to 300,000 units for families not eligible for public housing, but who cannot afford to buy homes at present prices.

Calls It Emergency

He said it was proper for the Federal Government to help in this since it was a "great emergency need" and private builders had not attempted to provide housing within the means of such persons.

Representative Abraham J. Multer (D., N. Y.) warned that the proposed cooperative housing would not be "a cure-all for our housing shortage," but it was one way to help solve the housing shortage.

He said the flags of socialism and communism had been waved at the housing bill. In a tour of European countries, he found that in those where "cooperative housing is looked upon as proper, there is found the greatest antagonism to communism."

Out of Committees

Lee F. Johnson, executive vice president of the National Public Housing Conference, announced that the House Committee on Banking and Currency had reported out the middle-income bill in the morning and the Senate Banking and Currency Committee reported it out in the afternoon with strong revisions.

More than 100 delegates from 16 States and the District attended the meeting with 60 organizations represented.

Among the delegates was George B. Hamilton, State treasurer of Georgia, who termed the housing bill a "step toward communism," since it encouraged cooperatives. He said this tended "to destroy the profit motive and free enterprise."

David L. Krooth of the National Housing Conference, replied that private contractors would build the housing, private capital would finance it and the homes would be privately owned.

Montgomery Group Formed in Protest of New Road Code

A group of Montgomery builders, businessmen and home owners have banded together to fight the county's proposed revision of its road ordinance.

The group, known the The Home Owners' Protective Association of Montgomery County, is sponsoring a mass meeting at 8 p. m., March 1 in the Silver Spring armory to hear an analysis of the proposed ordinance by Roger L. Whiteford, Washington attorney.

Don E. Gingery, Bethesda builder and developer and chairman of the group, yesterday said the group expressed "grave concern over the sudden rush with which its (the ordinance's) consideration has been accompanied, and by the refusal of the county to delay the hearing. . . ."

The council has scheduled a hearing on the revisions for 9 a. m., March 11 at the Rockvile Court House.

The revisions establish minimum standards for road construction and require subdividers to construct sidewalks, curbs, gutters and storm drainage, erect street signs and plant trees on all new roads.

180-Day Sentences Given in Assaults With Weapons

Municipal Judge George D. Neilson yesterday began a crackdown on persons convicted of assaults involving the use of weapons by passing out two 180-day straight-time sentences.

James W. Crawfod, 1936 Montana ave. ne., was sentenced to 180 days after he pleaded guilty to a charge of simple assault. Crawford had hit DeWitt Walker, 1780 Gales st. ne., with a club.

Richard Hariday, 845 Howard rd. se., was sentenced to 180 days and fined $250, with an additional 180 days in lieu of fine. Hariday was convicted of simple assault in the cutting of Clarence Jackson, 764 Howard rd. se., with a knife last January 20.

"Jail terms are the only language your type understands," Neilson commented. "All who appear before me convicted of such offenses will get straight time."

Frankfurt Holds Russian Girl as 'Confusion Agent'

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 23 (AP). A plump Russian girl described by the U. S. Army as "a possible Soviet confusion agent" was held here tonight on a charge of possessing improper identity documents.

Booked as Regina Rowiskeija, 22, she was arrested February 15 at Heidelberg after she had been trailed three months by counter-espionage agents. A "confusion agent" was defined as a person who spreads confusion and makes difficulties for the occupation forces to cover up for actual spies.

"She let herself be picked up, told us a dozen different stories, gave us a lot of different names—all untrue—to divert the energies of our men on a bunch of different wild goose chases," an Army spokesman said.

Carey Girl, 32 Days in Coma, May Go Home on Saturday

Eight-year-old Patricia Anne Carey, who was 32 days in a coma after being struck by an automobile, January 5, may be well enough to go home Saturday.

Dr. Vasilio S. Lambros, Washington neurosurgeon, who has been treating her at Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, disclosed this yesterday. He said he will decide Saturday if she may go home.

The girl was struck while crossing Piney Branch rd. and Sligo ave., on her way to school. State roads commission workers were busy yesterday installing a traffic signal system at the six-way intersection.

UCS Trustees Approve 1951 Welfare Sums

Trustees of United Community Services yesterday went on record in favor of an increased 1951 District Public Welfare budget.

The action was taken by adopting a report of the UCS Family and Child Welfare Section asserting that more welfare funds are needed to permit three improvements in public assistance services.

These would consist of grants to be made on the basis of current living costs, rather than those of 1946 now used as a basis for welfare budgets; allowance for special dietary needs for the sick, and the easing of present requirements forcing mothers to go to work.

Adoption of the report, which had been adopted by the UCS executive committee last November, came after UCS Executive Director Arthur H. Gruse said the real meaning of the recommendations was "that the aged, sick and dependent children shouldn't have to wait three to five weeks for food."

Virus Holding Feverish Grip On Arlington School Children

The "Arlington Virus," so called until it can be better identified, yesterday continued its fevered grip on Arlington (Va.) school children.

Meanwhile, investigators at the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md., said they'd start breaking open cultured eggs late today to try to identify the contagion.

Clinically and epidemiologically, they said, it appears to be an influenza virus, highly infectious but not too severe.

Its chief symptom is a high fever, with many of the sick having one or more other complaints such as nausea, sore throats and general weakness. Diarrhea and vomiting, the twin complaints of "Virus X," are not general in the outbreak.

Dr. Richard L. DeSaussure, director of medical inspection for District schools, said yesterday that the upper respiratory infection has not hit District classes to any noticeable degree. His 30 medical inspectors, however, have been alerted to report first signs of any outbreaks.

Dr. R. J. Huebner, head of the virus section of Public Health Service, was back at work yesterday after his own bout with the ailment he set out to investigate. Two co-workers were still confined to their homes.

Dr. Huebner said samples of throat washings, blood, and stool specimens collected last weekend from 36 patients in 26 Arlington homes have been injected into eggs for possible growth, isolation and identification. The minimum culture period ends late this afternoon, he said.

In Arlington, which at present seems to have a monopoly on the infection, the Woodmont Elementary School reopened yesterday after a three-day shutdown. Only 55 of the school's 150 pupils reported for classes. Fifty-one were present when Woodmont closed Monday.

At Old Dominion Junior High School, 50 of the 200 students failed to show up yesterday. Washington-Lee Senior High School, which draws its students from all parts of Arlington County, was missing 328 yesterday from its 2200 enrollment.

Officials at the senior high school said the absentee rate yesterday was more than twice that normally noted for this time of the year.

Mental Cases Discovered in D. C. Schools

There is a "great need" for an agency to treat the "borderline mental cases" turning up among District school children, a school medical inspector declared here last night.

Addressing the D. C. Public Schools Association in the District Building, Dr. Robert A. Bier suggested that some Community Chest agency might well handle such cases.

"The school medical inspection system is limited in its facilities for caring for these borderline mental cases," Doctor Bier said.

Suggests Adjunct

But in any event, he said, their care could best be handled through an "adjunct" to the medical inspection system rather than directly through the system itself.

Dr. W. Warrick Cardoza, another school medical inspector, listed these chief limitations of the inspection system:

"We are not permitted to examine below the waist—therefore an examination cannot be as 'complete' as it is supposed to be.

"We are not permitted to treat. We are not even supposed to give children aspirin.

"There is the problem of getting parents to cooperate in correcting defects once they are discovered."

Lists Chief Defects

Chief defects found among school children, Dr. Cardoza said, are decayed teeth, diseased tonsils and skin defects. Ringworm, impetigo and scabies are found tremendously among Negro children, he said.

Dr. Bier listed another "health hazard" he said he would like to see removed through someone putting "a little heat on the school board": The hazard of cinders spread around schools.

"When the children go down in them they hurt," he said. He suggested something like crushed bluestone be used instead.

39.7% of D. C. Land Is Tax Free

On a value basis, 39.7 percent of all real estate property in the District is on the tax-free list, a special Senate District Subcommittee was told yesterday.

This large lump of tax-exempt property is owned by the District, the Federal Government and charitable, patriotic and scientific organizations.

The exemptions represent a total tax loss of $20,865,239 annually to the city government.

These tax facts highlighted a preliminary staff report submitted to a special subcommittee, established last year to probe the extent and trend of properties on or seeking a place on the tax-free list.

Forty-two percent, or 13,043 acres, of the District's total acreage is owned by the Federal Government, the report disclosed.

The Senate group, headed by Senator Edward L. Leahy (D., R. I.), will delve further into the Capital's tax-exemption problem.

One member indicated the findings offer an up-to-date argument for a larger Federal payment to the District.

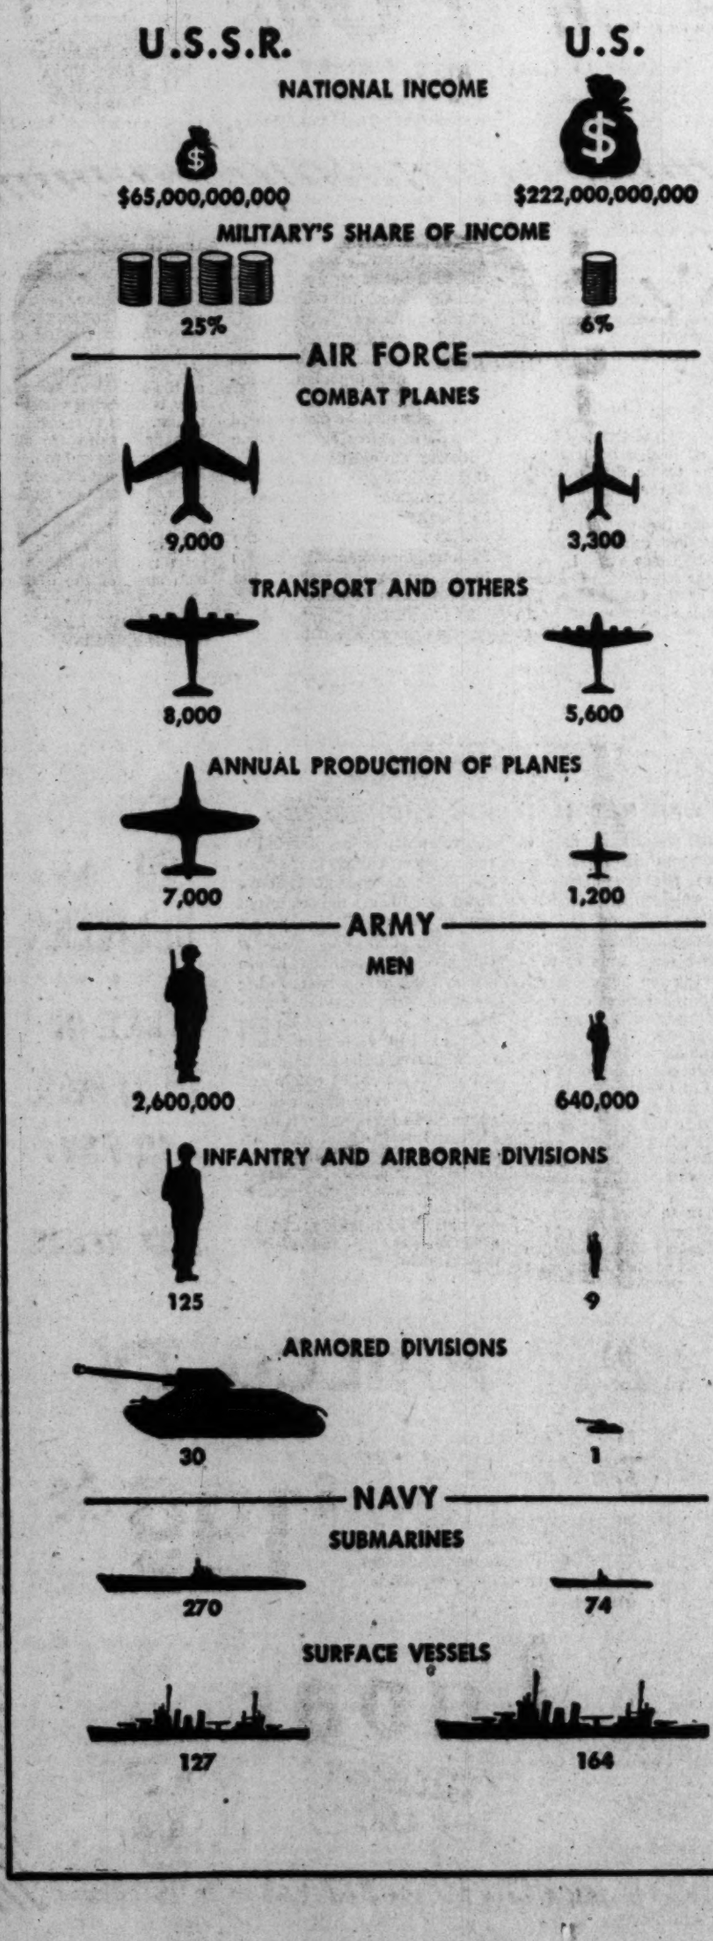
OF WAR AND PEACE IN 1950

What every American can know about the Military Power—and Bomb Power—of the U. S. and the Soviet Union.

RED MILITARY ADVANTAGE GROWS

Since secrecy hides most military statistics, this chart is based largely on well-qualified estimates. Included are main comparable elements of military forces of both powers. The U.S. Navy's moth-ball fleet is not indicated. Nor are the Navy's 5,500 combat planes or 3,000 trainers, which are essentially part of the carrier force and thus help create our superior surface fleet, shown at bottom of chart.



Has the Balance of Power in world affairs shifted from the United States to the Soviet Union? How strong is the United States—compared with the Soviet Union?

Are we in any position to "talk to Joe Stalin"?

LIFE this week presents an over-all picture of United States military strength, appraised in the light of the known military capacity and political aims of the Soviet Union.

LIFE brings you the facts about the U. S. atomic weapons program; tells you what Americans should know about the Atom Bomb.

In the year 1950, while the American people still have the freedom of choice, LIFE brings them the information they need to make responsible decisions. It brings it to them in response to the widespread belief that they have not been given the necessary facts.

Physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer points out that "the facts (about atomic energy) are of little use to the enemy, yet they are fundamental to an understanding of the issue of policy."

Hanson Baldwin, in the New York Times, writes: "Facts are the foundation of democracy—and facts we do not have."

James Reston, noted diplomatic correspondent, said: "The people have to be adequately informed...and the government is not doing what it could to keep informing them."

Perhaps the Government should give us more facts. But it is evident that most people are not familiar with the mass of facts already officially released. Therefore, in this issue, LIFE has made a vivid summary of the significant facts. In words, photographs, drawings, charts.

The current issue of LIFE will give to many Americans a common basis for calm discussion of what we are to do.

What do you think the United States should do?

The present military budget of the United States is $13.5 billion. Some careful students say it should be $4 billion more. The question now before the American people is—what must we do in order to preserve our security? How great is the danger of war? What is our ability to meet it? How much is it worth to be strong?

The current issue of LIFE—out today—will give you and your friends a frame of reference in these critical times. Ponder the questions it raises, and arrive at your conclusions.

The fourteen years of LIFE's existence have spanned the most critical time in the history of democracy. This week, and every week, LIFE brings to an ever increasing audience facts that enable Americans to evaluate and understand this world we live in.

Revived Statute

Having belatedly discovered the 1872 and 1873 laws forbidding racial discrimination in hotels, restaurants and certain other public places, the District Commissioners have taken the indubitably proper position of regarding them as still in force. They will seek to determine the validity of these laws by prosecuting the next complaint of discrimination on grounds of race in a restaurant. A complaint will no doubt be registered in the very near future.

If the laws are determined to be valid, let no one fear that the community will be rent asunder by them. Whites and Negroes in Washington have been accustomed for a long time to ride together in public conveyances, to sit side by side at certain athletic contests, even to eat with one another in Government cafeterias—and they will soon be permitted to attend the theater in each other's company. Privately operated restaurants, practicing no discrimination, function successfully at the airport and at the Union Station. The revived civil rights statutes will do no more than accelerate acceptance of a practice already becoming prevalent.

It is a practice so in conformity with American principles and with essential standards of decency that it should be the rule rather than the exception in the Capital of the United States. How this community ever lost the sense of common humanity that prompted it to adopt the civil rights acts of 1872 and 1873 is not easy to explain. But it is a sense that needs to be regained.

McCarthy's Reds

Senator McCarthy's extravagances about the State Department are certain to produce a great deal of mischief—which seems, in sober truth, to be their principal intent. Senator Lucas chose the only practical way to deal with them by proposing that they be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. But this proposal has now been blown up into a full-dress trial. The result will be to divert the committee's attention from much more pressing and important business, to aggravate public anxiety, and to injure the reputations of a number of devoted Government employes whose loyalty was investigated and established by the responsible authorities long ago.

The resolution that emerged from Wednesday's confused debate in the Senate sets up a Foreign Relations Subcommittee as a kind of combined prosecutor, grand jury and petit jury. A senatorial committee is not a court and should not undertake to discharge the functions of a court. If, as Senator McCarthy charged, "one of our foreign ministers"—whom he failed to name—actually passed highly secret information to a Soviet agent, he should, of course, be prosecuted under the Espionage Act and tried before a judge and jury. In respect of those who are not charged even by Senator McCarthy with having committed any crime, eligibility for Government service should be determined by the Loyalty Review Board, established for that specific purpose.

Senator Ferguson's amendment to the Lucas resolution directing the committee "to procure by subpena and examine loyalty and employment files" of all State Department employes, underscores the essential impropriety of the whole procedure. This is another demand that the Senate be shown FBI investigative reports. President Truman, following the example of a good many Presidents who preceded him, has repeatedly refused to make these reports available to congressional committees. They emphatically should not be made available because they contain undigested and unevaluated information from anonymous sources, much of it mere gossip, and because disclosure of the reports would disclose the identity of the FBI's confidential undercover informants.

Judging from Senator McCarthy's references to investigations conducted as long ago as 1945, he means to dredge up ancient allegations, no doubt included in the FBI reports but long since sifted and dismissed so far as present State Department employes are concerned. It is desirable, to be sure, that Mr. McCarthy should be compelled at last to put up or shut up. But exposure of the Senator should not be allowed to entail exposure of groundless allegations against individuals who have already passed through the mill of loyalty clearance. The Senator's animus is apparently centered mainly on those persons who had intelligence and understanding in reporting on the China situation. Their sin, in his view, it would seem, was that they were prematurely right about a foregone conclusion.

Defense And Nonsense

In several countries in the days of the phony war the fear of bombs created even more havoc than the bombs themselves. In Europe key cities were emptied of women and children and some of the government departments were scattered; in consequence, work suffered and government was impeded. In some cases a constant inward and outward movement was enforced upon the people as fears fell and then rose again; the strain on transport and other facilities was immense. These constant shifts and interferences with normal life created a sense of terror and impending doom which was wholly detrimental to morale. Hindsight showed that the enemy had won a great advantage just by keeping a sword of Damocles hanging over the affected governments. It is a made-in-Moscow dodge, and is called "confusion technique" in the Communist texts.

Something of the same blind and wasteful preparedness seems to be involved in present plans and discussions for establishing "an alternative seat of government" which would function parallel with Washington. The new chief of the Office of Civilian Defense, Dr. Paul J. Larsen, seems to have ideas about civil defense which are quite "discombobulating." There would be such a large scale dispersal of offices that Washington would be left with scarcely anything but the President, Congress, and the Department of Defense. And what was left would be condemned to underground life. How we could get along in Washington without at least having the Treasury around is not explained. To be sure, communication is now very rapid, but the notion of Secretary Snyder having to make constant trips to and from, say, the Rockies is hardly one to entertain seriously. But the Senate would be expected to be thrifty of the services of its presiding officer, let alone Secretary Snyder. "I would recommend that Vice President Alben Barkley stay out of Washington as much as possible," says Dr. Larsen, darkly. In other words, the public safety now calls for keeping Mr. Barkley as much as possible in mothballs somewhere in, say, the Shenandoah Valley. The cost of such a scheme, let alone the premium it would put on operational inefficiency and even chaos, would be prohibitive.

To create havoc is not to be forearmed, surely. To put the country in an obvious posture for coping with attack is truly the way, if not to invite attack, then to forestall attack. Without turning a finger Moscow would by this means hogtie the Government for normal performance. Prudence, to be sure, is needed, and we are all for the Office of Civilian Defense, and, indeed, for Representative Holifield's proposal for a commission to study the problem. But what is distinctly not needed is alarmist and extravagant preparedness of a nature which would introduce abnormality in the Government process and emergency conditions. Where the borderline between prudence and necessary preparedness lies, we don't profess to know; but there is such a frontier, and the golden rule in all forms of security must be the determination of relative risk. There is only one comfort in this horrific discussion, and that is the common sense of the American people. They seem already to be thinking of their Capital as a scare as well as a secret headquarters. If they ever do get the jitters, it will be more because of the goings on in Washington than because of Muscovite aggression.

Storm Over India

It is the usual thing in international affairs to get excited about stables after the horse has fled. The Indo-Pakistan squabble is a case where the horse is still in the stable, though the stable might collapse at any moment. To be more literal, the cold war there is getting hotter every minute, and the situation in the Bengals in particular is becoming more and more incendiary. To our view the conflict takes the lead among the world's danger spots.

In the partition, Bengal was divided between India and Pakistan. East Bengal is Pakistan's and was renamed Eastern Pakistan; West Bengal is India's and has kept that designation. A blockade separates both areas, though one is essential to the other's functioning, for Eastern Pakistan grows jute and West Bengal, where Calcutta is located, manufactures it. Trouble has grown out of the idleness of Pakistan farmers and Calcutta workers, and is taking the form of communal riots between Hindu and Muslim. The Muslims in Calcutta are fleeing to Eastern Pakistan, Hindus in East Pakistan are fleeing across East Bengal's northern border into India's northernmost state of Assam. "The problem of Calcutta and West Bengal," Premier Nehru says, "is not a provincial problem, but an all-India one, and the burden of solving it must rest with the whole of India."

This is the kind of meaningless sentiment that keeps the Indo-Pakistan issue in dead center—or, rather, that lets it deteriorate. What "the whole of India" thinks about the Indo-Pakistan conflict is problematical. It is difficult however, to believe that the people on either side are happy over the strife and fear and hardship that are entailed. At any rate, they cannot act to solve it; that is the function of their leaders. Perhaps their leaders feel that no concession can be made without imperiling their own leadership. In that event recourse to third-party intercession is the only way out of a dilemma which is holding up public as well as private enterprise. It has been our own view that all the issues between India and Pakistan are interlinked. It follows that, since the United Nations is stymied on one of them, viz, Kashmir, the United States should offer its good offices in exploring an across-the-board settlement, in company with a member of the Commonwealth group and the Monetary Fund, if not the World Bank as well.

All that Secretary Acheson has said on the subject so far is that the opportunity of agreement rests with the parties in dispute. However, Dr. Philip Jessup is now in India, and that may be a sign of concern if not of contemplated help in mediation. It is to be hoped so. For an explosion between India and Pakistan is bound to set up a chain reaction, and beyond Asia, too.

Clearing Union

During the past year and a half intra-European trade has been financed by a complicated network of bilateral arrangements combined with limited payments agreements. The aim now is to set up a multilateral payments system that will provide complete transferability of the currencies of participating countries among themselves.

Under this system each country could use the currency of any other member of the group to settle its current debts with a third country. A country having a net deficit on current account in its dealings with all other western European countries would receive from the clearing agency credits to settle that account. At the same time it would be discouraged from incurring overlarge deficits. Contrariwise, a creditor country would be discouraged from acquiring excessive surplus credits on current account. Under this system the United States would be called upon to help finance transfers, since at any given time the payments of dollars to creditors through the central clearing agency might be larger than the payments of dollars to the organization by debtors.

Obviously no system for clearing can be relied upon to work unless the participants intensify their efforts to balance their trading accounts with the other members of the group. This is the object of the clearing union proposal. An improved payments system providing for currency transferability would facilitate the abolition of trade barriers for these are largely the result of currency inconvertibility.

ECA in order to get this amount of integration in Europe is now proposing to add pressure to exhortation. Countries willing to undertake the risks and suffer the temporary dislocations inherent in the program will be rewarded. Specifically Mr. Hoffman proposes that at least 600 million dollars of the next ECA appropriation should be set aside for countries willing to liberalize their trade policies and for support of the payments union. This is a rehash of a proposal that Senator Fulbright made before the second year of Marshall aid was authorized.

At that time there was support for it in neither the State Department nor the ECA, but times have changed, and the feeling now appears to be general that the governments in Europe will not respond with anything but insincere promises to the integration pledges exchanged when ECA was established, unless a system of rewards for performance is instituted. In these circumstances 600 million dollars is, in our opinion, not enough; it should be twice that amount.

Gagging Crommelin

Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin apparently does not understand the meaning of No. If his indictment of "Prussian Pentagon policies" in speeches on the West Coast are not intended to bring martyrdom, it is hard to understand what their purpose is. Captain Crommelin's views were not officially requested, as in testimony before Congress; here Crommelin was the instigator, and was voicing his disagreement gratuitously. He has been instructed by the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Sherman, to refrain from public statements criticizing official policy. For him to reply obtusely that he will continue so to do unless specifically ordered to stop is to be responsible for an act of deliberate disobedience.

The issue is not Captain Crommelin's sincerity in defending his opinion, nor is it freedom of speech. He has a perfect right to criticize Pentagon policies privately or in the course of duty, and to try to get these policies changed. He also has the right of any American to criticize policies in public—if he resigns his commission and talks as a civilian. What he does not have a right to do is to foment disunity within the military establishment while wearing a Navy uniform.

Admiral Sherman already has treated Crommelin with kid gloves in order to diminish the controversy within the Navy. Instead of the court-martial which was warranted by Crommelin's spectacular disclosure of the confidential Bogan memorandum last fall, he merely received a reprimand and was transferred to another station. Obviously this merely served to spur Crommelin on. If he now is intent on forcing the issue, in the interest of discipline the Navy can hardly avoid calling his hand.

BELOVED, YOU HAVE GIVEN ME YOUR NAME

Your name is proud as lilies white and still,
Your name is deep as water without sound,
As radiant as sunrise on a hill,
As secret as the first bud out of ground;
Your name is quietness when trumpets flare,
Your name is singing when the silence falls,
As cool as curtains blowing in the air,
As soft as elm trees when the first snow falls.

Beloved, you have given me this thing
That clothes my heart with wind and star and dew,
With swift exulting and shy wondering,
That makes me not myself but part of you—
A strange new creature born of song and flame:
Beloved, you have given me your name!

Electoral Reform

The recent announcement of liberal opposition to the Lodge-Gossett amendment raises three pertinent questions:

First, the propriety of Messrs. Loeb and LaFollette's making public statements on an issue on which no representative body of Americans for Democratic Action has taken a position. However vehemently they declare that they speak only for themselves, it is inevitable that an impression of ADA opposition to the amendment is given to the public. Indeed, the views of Messrs. Loeb and LaFollette are newsworthy solely because of their association with ADA.

Second, the accuracy of their contention that the effect of the amendment would be to decrease the influence in national elections of progressive elements and increase the influence of conservative elements in the South. It should reduce the effect of blocs of every description, and at the same time should contribute to development of a two-party system in the South, with the growth of liberalism in that section a probable corollary development.

Third, the moral soundness of the reasoning advanced by Messrs. Loeb and LaFollette in support of their position on the amendment. While it is essential that liberals, to be effective, should not lose sight of the political realities, it is somewhat disillusioning to find the leadership of a fine national organization, "dedicated to the achievement of freedom and economic security for all people everywhere," governed to such an extent by pragmatic considerations. This great reform, designed to place a higher value on the votes of American citizens in each of the 48 States, must not be sacrificed to preserve the special privileges of any bloc, however meritorious its objectives.

Contraceptive Sales

In answer to "R. E.'s" letter of February 20, regarding H.B. No. 5 at Annapolis which will prevent the sale of contraceptives (prophylactics) in vending devices in Maryland, may I quote from a letter by Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the Maryland Department of Health?

". . . In my opinion the use of prophylactics in general in a civilian population as a measure for preventing the spread of the venereal diseases is unreliable and plays only a negligible part, if any, in the control of these diseases. For this reason the State Department of Health certainly would not oppose any proposed legislation which would prohibit the installation and maintenance of vending devices for the sale of contraceptives in public rest rooms.

"I concur in your view that placing contraceptives on sale in public places is, indirectly, an invitation to promiscuity, and I agree that they should not be displayed where they will be readily accessible to young children and adolescents."

Burnside Bridge

Upon reading the February 17 letter of Mr. David H. Brown expressing doubt of the authenticity of Brady's photograph of Burnside's Bridge. I carefully checked data available to me and I am convinced Mr. Brown is correct.

As have many students of the Civil War, including the eminent authorities Mr. Brown cites, I have accepted without question the identification of the bridge as carried in The Photographic History of the Civil War.

Now, upon comparing the Brady photograph with Maj. N. Michler's excellent large-scale (1:21,120) topographical map of the battlefield, it is readily apparent that the bridge photographed by Brady could have been none other than the "middle" or "Sharpsburg" bridge 1¼ miles above Burnside's. Roads, buildings and fences in the photograph all correspond to those on the map. In addition to the foregoing evidence, II Battles and Leaders, 634, identifies a sketch of the bridge made from Brady's photograph as the "Sharpsburg Bridge."

Low-Flying Planes

The opening of the new South Capitol st. bridge has certainly eased the traffic flow over the Anacostia River, but being so close to the Anacostia Naval Air Station and Bolling Field it has quite another different hazard.

Several times as I have crossed the new bridge I've been amazed at the frightening low level of the planes coming in over the bridge for landing at the air stations.

Why can't some sort of precautionary methods be taken now, before it has been proved a dangerous situation?

M. DARNEILLE.

World Federation

In your February 9 editorial "Acheson's Homily" you called for a dynamic "bold new program."

The American people are ready for a bold new program. That program is a-borning in the House and Senate at this moment. One hundred and five members of the House, and 22 Senators (or more) now support HCR 64 and SCR 56, now in committees. These are identical world federation resolutions, calling upon Congress to officially declare its intention to work for the strengthening of the U. N., making it possible for the United Nations to make and enforce world law as the only means for creating world peace.

Many Americans thought that peace problems were largely solved at San Francisco in 1945. They were disappointed. The U. N. as now organized is important.

But let us not be disappointed by half measures again. Some advocate an exclusive Atlantic Union—simply a super-nation among nations. If, as proposed by the Atlantic Union, the federation were to include only the Atlantic democracies, what is to happen to the rest of the Pan-American nations?

The "bold new program" must be one open to any nation, anywhere, willing to subscribe to world law and to a world court, empowered to enforce its decisions on individuals as regards the world laws only.

Washington Heart Campaign

Although results to date in the Washington 1950 Heart Campaign are not too discouraging, the support of voluntary contributors is needed to put the Washington Heart Association's Drive for a fund of $75,000 over the top before March 1. Receipts reported at our mid-campaign luncheon last Monday totalled $32,470.

The problem of heart disease is one that concerns all of us. In an age of achievement in the physical sciences, it is a shock to learn that the causes of our Nation's leading health problem, the heart anad blood vessel diseases, still baffle medical science.

According to Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, heart disease is the most challenging problem in public health today. The cardiovascular diseases, Dr. Scheele reports, cause 10 out of 23 of our deaths, with one out of every 20 persons in the country suffering from one form or another of these afflictions. He declares that "more than 60 million Americans now alive will die of these diseases—unless fully effective control measures are developed in the near future."

Although the toll of the heart diseases cannot readily be dismissed, there is a more hopeful side to the picture.

Over the past 25 years there has been greater scientific advance in the understanding of cardiovascular diseases than in all the years before. New surgical techniques and the uses of new drugs have brought alleviation in several forms of heart disease and have reduced their toll sharply. New approaches to diagnosis and treatment now offer relief to many cardiac sufferers and a positive way of living for more happy, useful years.

It is no accident that the span of years in which the richest advances have been made in coping with heart disease coincides with the lifetime of the one voluntary agency devoted to their understanding, the American Heart Association. That devoted group of the country's leading heart specialists, an organization that only recently emerged as a national health agency embracing leaders in the lay field, has been the spearhead of the assault upon the secrets of the human heart function. And in its positive program of research, of public and professional education, and of guidance in community cardiac services through local heart associations (tripled in number in the last year or so), the American Heart Association deserves continued public support.

Funds raised locally will be used to continue and expand various programs of the Washington Heart Association such as: occupational therapy training for cardiac clinic adult patients confined to their homes; cardiac camp started in July 1949 for 100 white and colored children with heart disease; in-bed club for 350 children whose injured hearts keep them in bed for three hours or more each day; local fellowship grants which combine research, advanced training and community service in the field of heart disease; public education on heart diseases through pamphlets, information directories, radio programs, speeches and articles; and professional education through a regular monthly series of addresses to doctors by nationally prominent cardiologists.

Part of the funds will go to the American Heart Association with which the local association is affiliated for research in causes of diseases of the heart and blood vessels as well as other activities.

The people of Washington still have an opportunity to join in the fight to combat heart disease. Contributions can be made by simply addressing donations to H-E-A-R-T, Washington, D. C.

No Overture To Russia

By Marquis Childs

Truman's Attitude

IF PRESIDENT TRUMAN had been more candid in his Washington's Birthday address at Alexandria, it might have been easier to understand the limitations of that speech. To have stated the reasons behind his refusal to recognize the growing demand in this country for a new approach to the Soviet Union might have clarified the Administration's stand.

The President and his Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, are convinced that any new overture to the Soviet Union could only do more harm than good. They believe that any agreement between the two countries would be worse than no agreement. Their reasoning is as follows.

The Russians are just now in the ascendancy. Beginning with the successful atomic explosion of last September, their stock has been steadily rising. The victory of the Chinese Communists has convinced the Russians that, as a recent dispatch out of Moscow put it, their position is stronger than at any time since the revolution of 1917.

Therefore, if the United States moved at this point for negotiations looking to a new agreement, Moscow would be certain to demand a high price. The price would, in fact, be so high that Washington could not possibly afford to pay it.

Failure of the negotiations would lead to deep disillusion.

More serious, it would give the advocates of a preventive war the opportunity they have been seeking. They could argue that the United States having made every effort for peace, nothing remained but to take the first pretext to destroy a force obviously bent on destroying us. In a mood of disillusion this logic might have a forceful appeal.

ACHESON and the President feel the futility of a new conference even more strongly from the viewpoint of the stipulations which this Government would feel compelled to make on Moscow. Nothing less than the basic elements of the Baruch plan for atomic control would be acceptable to Washington. Yet acceptance of these elements by Moscow would mean a virtual transformation of the Soviet system and such a transformation is inconceivable.

Still another obstacle, as viewed from the White House and the State Department, is the determination of the Soviets to build a chain of atomic power stations for peacetime use. In this way, leaping over the age of steam and electricity, they propose at one bound to surpass the West. They would consent, at the very most, to nothing more than periodic or token United Nations inspection of such power stations. And these stations could, of course, be transformed overnight from a peaceful purpose to the making of atomic explosives.

Therefore, the determination of the President and the Secretary is to accept the present situation. It is to recognize frankly that both sides are stockpiling atomic bombs and to believe that Russia will not suddenly use this force so long as the United States has the power to retaliate in kind. This position has at least the persuasion of recognizing the grim realities as they exist on both sides of the dividing line.

THE PRESIDENT seemed to be attempting in his talk to try to keep the door open at least a crack. But his meaning was not altogether clear. He said that the plan for control of atomic energy approved by all but the Soviets and their satellites in the U. N. "has our support not because of its form or its words but because we believe it would achieve effective control."

Then, however, he went on to deny any "pride of authorship" and to "ask only for a plan that provides an effective workable system." That is so small a sign of intention that it is not likely to impress opinion either at home or abroad.

Even within the framework of the determination to hold the present status the President could have said more. This is not an answer to those who feel that an affirmation of America's desire for peace is at the very least called for from the President. Nor is it likely to quiet the demand for a new effort to come to an agreement with the Soviet Union.

Partly, of course, this demand has a political motivation. But, as the response to Harold Stassen's concrete proposal for a meeting in some neutral capital indicates, it is effective politics. It brings a response from the hearts and minds of millions of Americans.

Powerful as is the argument for sitting tight and holding to the status quo, such a policy has a cold and precarious sound. The risks in it, as the President and his Secretary of State well know, are very great. They lie in an untoward and irrational act in, say, Berlin or Yugoslavia. But to those who complain of the cold comfort in this stand, the President would reply that almost any kind of peace is better than total war in the atomic era.

No Limestone Here

In the interests of accuracy, permit me to call your attention to an error in the February 14 account of the rock slide on Canal rd. The headlines to the story, the caption to the picture, and the story itself refer to the rock in question as "limestone," which is incorrect. There is no limestone hereabouts and the rock is a feldspathic mica schist, of altogether different composition and geological significance.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

The Kennan Swan Song

Joseph Alsop has arrived in London to cover the British elections held yesterday; he will go from London to Germany, Finland, Yugoslavia, Italy and France to interpret events on the continent.

THE ARTICLE called "Is War With Russia Inevitable?" in the current issue of the Reader's Digest must be regarded as a major statement of American policy. It is the swan song of George Kennan, the brilliant State Department official who has now resigned, and who has probably had a deeper influence on the formation of American policy since the war than any other single individual.

This signed article was studied, revised, drafted and redrafted over a period of several months, and finally approved by the chief policy-making officials of the State Department. Here, then, in capsule form, are the basic assumptions underlying American foreign policy in the Acheson regime. Thus the article deserves close attention.

The article consists of a general study of Soviet aims and capabilities, and a brief outline of an American program of action designed to bring about a situation in which a peaceful settlement with the Soviet Union will be possible. Much of it reflects that combination of intellectual depth and plain common sense which Kennan brings to anything he writes. Yet its net effect is disturbing, simply because Kennan—quite unintentionally, according to those who know his views—leaves the impression that no special extra effort is now required to win the cold war.

IN THE first place, Kennan makes certain apparent assumptions about the Soviet Union which seem difficult to square with the known facts. One of these is that the Russians have already "bitten off more than they can chew," and that the experience of Titoism "should make the Kremlin more wary, rather than less, about taking on bigger bites at this time."

This looks like a sort of theory of Soviet surfeit," not unlike the tragically discredited theory of Nazi surfeit. Yet even as the article is published the Soviets are in process of digesting their hugest bite—China—and are visibly preparing to bite deep by every possible means into southeast Asia. Further, as Secretary Acheson has just pointed out, the Kremlin is "pursuing its aims with increasing boldness" in Europe, with heightened pressure all around the Soviet periphery—Finland, Berlin, Austria, Yugoslavia. Here, surely, is no evidence of surfeit.

Even more puzzling is Kennan's argument that Soviet mastery of atomic energy "does not affect the situation very much." The Soviet leaders are "not suicidally inclined," and they know that an aggressor "must have some means of neutralizing the military-industrial potential of the North American continent." The article was written before the hydrogen bomb issue was forced into public debate, yet Kennan must have known of the hydrogen bomb. And if Drs. Urey, Einstein and a host of others are correct, surprise attack with hydrogen bombs will provide the means for neutralizing North America. Even given the capacity of retaliation, it is hard to believe that the prospect of Soviet stock-piling of hydrogen bombs "does not change the situation very much."

YET IF these assumptions seem disturbingly optimistic, Kennan's outline of an American program of action for dealing with Soviet expansion is clear and realistic. He points out, as Acheson has done, that "agreements" with the Kremlin will have no meaning until the Kremlin is faced with "a situation in fact which it is our business to help to create." The objective is to confront the Soviet Union with such power as to lead to a total reversal of Soviet policy, so that the Kremlin wholly abandons the attempt to "establish political power over other peoples."

To this end, the United States must maintain a military posture designed to "make sure that military aggression remains improbable if not impossible." We must also toughen the "fiber of resistance among our allies," by reinforcing "their own sense of military security." And we must "throw our weight into the balance wherever there are relatively good chances of halting Soviet expansion."

This is an admirable program. But again, the net effect is unfortunate simply because the reader is left with the impression that we are doing all these things. In fact, we are not.

THE REAL military power of the United States is demonstrably declining, while the military power of the Soviet Union is rapidly increasing. The effort, through the military aid program, to give our allies the indispensable "sense of military security" is hardly more than a joke, and is so regarded throughout Europe. And partly because of this, the Western confederation is threatened with dissolution, while Soviet expansion continues in Asia almost unopposed.

Thus what Kennan has left unsaid is a good deal more important than what he has said. The real lesson of Kennan's swan song is that our effort to create the "situation of fact," which Kennan rightly considers essential to peace, consists of a series of half-measures. The requirements of Kennan's own program cannot be fulfilled with one eye on the budget and another on the elections. There is good reason to believe that Kennan is convinced that this is so. It is a pity that his position has prevented him from pointing it out. For unless this country is prepared to make a great effort soon, the answer to Kennan's question—Is war with Russia inevitable?—cannot much longer continue to be "no."

Senate Talks All Day About Potato Prices

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate spent all yesterday debating a bill by Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) to refuse price supports to 1950 potatoes unless they are grown under marketing quotas.

While the Senate debated, the Government's Commodity Credit Corporation was buying new potatoes in Florida. According to officials of the Production and Marketing Administration, from one to three carloads of Florida's early crop are being bought daily.

Chief objection to Lucas' proposal came from New England Republican Senators George D. Aiken (Vt.) and Owen Brewster (Me.). Most of the 40 million bushels of potatoes the Government still expects to buy ,before its anticipated loss of 100 million dollars on 1949 potatoes is complete, are in New England—largely in Maine.

Aiken argued that the Lucas amendment would amount to repudiation of an "implied promise by the Government to support this year's crop. It is too late to back up on 1950 price supports, he said.

The Lucas proposal, he asserted, would do "more than anything else to break down the confidence of the farmers in their Government." If they can repudiate price supports for potatoes in the middle of a crop year, he said, they can do the same at any time for corn, wheat, cotton and all other crops.

Aiken was opposed by Senators John J. Williams (R., Del.), and Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), while chief supporters of his attack on the Lucas move were Senators Eugene Millikin (R., Colo.) Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) and Glen H. Taylor (D., Ida.).

In defending his proposal Lucas referred to the "scandalous things that have happened to the potato program" and declared the potato situation "will ultimately destroy the foundations of our successful Agricultural Adjustment Act."

Lucas recalled that Congress had been urged by the Department of Agriculture to correct the situation in potatoes since 1946.

Senators Plan FEPC 'Teeth'

posed compulsory FEPC legislation."

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), chief strategist for the Senate's Dixie forces, reasserted his opposition to "any FEPC bill."

Chief author of the House voluntary measure was Representative Samuel K. McConnell, jr., (R., Pa.). He modeled it after the bill of a leading opponent of compulsory FEPC, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

The bill sets up a five-man Fair Employment Practice Commission, thus preserving the FEPC label. The commission could investigate job discrimination, subpena witnesses, make reports on the facts and attempt adjustments by voluntary means. But the only penalty in the bill is a $500 fine for "forcibly" resisting commission investigators.

One provision of the bill specifically directs the commission to investigate discrimination in the Government and to "recommend" legislation to Congress to end it.

The rejected Administration bill would have empowered the commission to issue "cease and desist" orders against job discrimination by employers of more than 50 persons and to resort to the courts to back up its findings.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr. (D., N. Y.), author of the Administration bill, hit the substitute as "a fraud, a sham and a hypocrisy."

Speaking for a group of Northern Democrats who first tried to recommit the bill and then voted "No", he said it would "allow the Senate to invoke a phony cloture and thus not test the Wherry rule."

But Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (Dem.-Lib., N. Y.) said another group of Northern Democrats feared a vote against the bill would kill any prospect of stronger FEPC legislation this session.

"We kept FEPC alive," Roosevelt said, "in order to test the real obstruction to all civil rights legislation—the phony Wherry cloture rule."

The Southern filibuster against any FEPC action finally cracked early Thursday when Administration forces succeeded in limiting debate.

Before the McConnell substitute was even tentatively approved, these amendments were tied to it:

By Representative Sam Hobbs (D., Ala.), specifying that no unqualified person must be employed on a job. Approved, 149 to 91.

By Representative John W. Heselton (R., Mass.), stressing use of "conference, conciliation and persuasion" in ending job discrimination. Approved, 186 to 54.

By Representative Dwight L. Rogers (D., Fla.), opposing job discrimination because of "sex." Approved, 182 to 105.

By Representative Ben F. Jensen (R., Iowa), excluding Communists from job protection under the bill. Approved, voice vote.

By Representative William M. Colmer (D., Miss.), exempting the Atomic Energy Commission or its licensees from provisions of the bill. Approved, voice vote.

By Representative Kenneth B. Keating (R., N. Y.) providing that the commission must be bipartisan. Approved, voice vote.

By Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), providing commission hearings must be held in the same Federal court district in which the alleged job discrimination takes place. Approved, 211 to 116.

By Representative Robert Sikes (D., Fla.) providing that absence of employes of certain race, creed or color shall not necessarily be considered evidence of discrimination. Approved, voice vote.

By Representative Robert Hale (R., Me), opposing discrimination political affiliation. Approved, voice vote.

By Representative Charles E. Bennett (D., Fla.), opposing discrimination because of "physical disability." Approved, voice vote.

Falls Church Charter Bill Introduced

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 23.—A charter for the city of Falls Church, as recommended by the town council, was presented to the General Assembly today by Delegate Edwin Lynch, of Fairfax.

The document, a House bill of more than 100 pages, would make the locality officially operative as a chartered city of the second class. This status was achieved by virtue of a population increase beyond 5000 inhabitants.

Lynch said the charter embraces many suggestions brought out at extensive public hearings before the town council. Several changes have resulted from conferences with City Attorney Larue Van Meter and officials of the division of statutory research and drafting at the State Capitol.

One of the latter is elimination of a section prohibiting injunctive proceedings against the city, Lynch said.

The charter provides that Falls Church shall be governed by a seven-member city council, one of whom shall be elected mayor by the body.

Cafes Warned Of Penalties In Racial Law

The Coordinating Committee for the Enforcement of D. C. Anti-Discrimination Laws warned yesterday that restaurants which refuse admittance to Negroes face—under the "revived" anti-discriminational laws of 1872 and 1873—a $100 fine and loss of license for a year.

The Washington Restaurant Association Tuesday advised its members to continue their seating policies until a test case is descided in court. The Coordinating Committee said it made its statement in answer to the Association's recommendation.

The Coordinating Committee also asserted that if a test case is brought against one restaurant, "others not proceeded against have no basis for complacency pending judicial discrimination."

Prince Georges Repeals Rule

The Prince Georges County Board of Election Supervisors has repealed the rule that before a person can become a registered voter he must obtain a release from the State in which he had previously registered.

The board ruled, however, that all voters be informed that they should obtain such a release or face criminal prosecution.

Registration officers were told to register applicants who have been residents of Maryland for one year and of the county for six months.

Truman Challenges U.S. Notion Of 2-Party Political System

President Truman, who has his eye on the whistle stops again, talked politics at a White House news conference yesterday, and challenged the notion that this country has a two-party system.

It has four, he said, and listed them as follows: the Dixicrats, whom he described as half Republican; the Repulican Party; what's left of Henry Wallace's Progressives, and what he called the real national party—the Democratic Party. Both the Democratic Party and the GOP, he said, had two wings.

Mr. Truman expressed the hope that a great many Republicans would be defeated by Democrats in the 1950 elections, including Senator Wiley (R., Wis.). He had more to say on politics, most of it in a humorous and philosophical vein.

On the question of foreign policy, the Chief Executive said again that he didn't think anything could be settled by a highly dramatic, showy approach to the Russians.

He said the United States had made every approach possible through regular diplomatic channels and through the United Nations to get an agrement on atomic energy. He said he saw no need of a new approach. In answer to a reporter's question, he said there had been no sign of any "new feelers" from the Russians.

Politics Starts With Wiley

The political talk at the President's news conference began when he was asked whether it was true that he would like to see Senator Wiley of Wisconsin replaced by a Democrat. Mr. Truman answered that he was hopeful that a great many Republicans would be replaced by Democrats, including Wiley.

He said, in answer to another question, that it was a good guess that if he went out to dedicate a new unit of the Grand Coulee Dam in Washington, he would make some speeches at whistle stops. The trip, if it is made, will come this spring.

Asked to distinguish between a political speech and a nonpolitical speech, Mr. Truman laughed and said that any speech he made was political, whether it was delivered in Alexandria, New York, or from the back of a train.

He said a moment later, however, that his foreign policy speech in Alexandria on Washington's Birthday was for the whole country and not for any political party. On the other hand, he said, his speech at the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner was a political statement.

New Sales Tax Law Brings Druggist Fine

John R. Russell, a druggist of 4600 14th st. nw., yesterday was fined $25 in Municipal Court on charges of selling cigarettes without a license, as required in the District sales-tax law.

Officials at the District tax collector's office said that the case marked the first such prosecution since enactment of the law last May.

62 Job Applicants Rejected for Security Reasons by State Dept.

The State Department last year rejected 62 job applicants for "security" reasons, and 246 others on character and suitability grounds.

Samuel Boykin, who administers the 70-man investigative staff, told the House Appropriations Committee that no State employes were ousted last year under the McCarran rider which gives the department wide firing powers over employes suspected of either disloyalty or of being security risks.

He testified that some of the rejected applicants had been given jobs in other Federal agencies.

Boykin said that a total of 7264 investigations were made last year. The inquiries, he said, are carried on without the employes' knowledge.

Assistant Secretary John Peurifoy told the committee that as far as he knew "all of the employes of the department are loyal."

JOBS: The local Census offices here still have openings for about 500 enumerators to take this year's general census in this city. The jobs will last from four to six weeks. Applications must pass tests to be considered. Applicants for jobs in the NW and SW sections should apply at 1622 H st. nw. For jobs in the SE and NE sections, apply at Quam Hall, 24th st. and Oklahome ave. ne.

OHE: The office of the Housing Expediter has only enough money to operate through the early part of April. Its employes and officials alike are wondering if they'll have another round of payless paydays.

The President has requested additional operating funds for the rent control agency. Also, he has asked for extension of rent control beyond June 30.

OHE dropped 1300 employes in the six-month period from last July 1 to the end of December. It plans to gradually lay off another 250 before June 30, but the agency will have to close its doors unless it gets the money—and soon.

BEP: The long-awaited apprentice plate printer exam will be given soon for openings in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing by the Civil Service Commission.

The commission announced the test in November, 1948. However, it was indefinitely postponed when the bureau secured enough modern equipment — equipment once intended for shipment to Russia —to offset the need for 150 plate printers. The new machines are nearly all in operation and BEP officials foresee the need of additional plate printers. Hence, the postponed exam has been dusted off and it will be given.

Half of the original applicants were Negroes. There are no Negro plate printers now. Successful applicants will undergo a two-year training period before they can be promoted to plate printers.

The postponement of the exam is one of the charges Negro applicants used to accuse the bureau of racial discrimination. Treasury cleared the bureau of the charges but the case has been appealed to Civil Service's fair employment board. The left-wing UPWA is handling the case for some of the applicants.

HEARING: A hearing on Civil Service's new efficiency rating plan and the Hoover Commission's proposals for Civil Service reforms will open March 2. It will be conducted by a Senate Civil Service subcommittee headed by Senator Long (D., La.).

The hearing is likely to extend over several weeks as members of the Hoover group, Federal officials, and others have been invited to testify. The veterans' organizations and employe groups will oppose many of the Hoover suggestions.

Dr. Johnson Resigns As AEC Research Aide

Dr. Ralph P. Johnson resigned yesterday as deputy director of the Atomic Energy Commission's research division. A successor has not yet been appointed.

Johnson, a native of St. Pauls, N. C., has held high posts in atomic research since June, 1947. He will leave here February 28 to join the staff of the Hughes Aircraft Co., Culver City, Calif.

County Head Asked to Quit —Denies Bias In Zone Row

Prince Georges Group Says Welsh Had Interest in Proposed Housing

A group of 30 Prince Georges County citizens yesterday demanded the resignation of County Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh, sr., as a result of his vote for the rezoning of the 22-acre Keller tract off Defense hwy.

The group, representing six citizens associations, alleges that Welsh, in favoring the rezoning, "was motivated by personal gain"—a charge immediately and flatly denied by Welsh.

The tract in controversy is next to Woodlawn subdivision and was rezoned from one-family residential to two-family residential (permitting semidetached construction) classification. It was on the request of Frank J. Keller, who is selling the property to Edwin B. Feldman, a Washington builder. T. Hammond Welsh, jr., son of the commissioner, represented Feldman.

The county commissioners on February 15 denied in a 3-to-2 vote a rehearing on its rezoning action, with Welsh declaring "he was tired of hearing petitions over and over."

Committee Formed

The letter demanding the resignation of Welsh was signed by Brendan O'Dwyer, as chairman, and the executive officers of the Woodlawn, Bellemead, Defense Heights, Landover Hills, Landover Suburban, and West Lanham Hills citizens associations, leaders in Radiant Valley, which has no citizens' association, and members of the Landover Hills Town Council.

The letter, addressed to Welsh, was made public by the Public Interest Committee of Prince Georges County, organized Monday with the same membership. The committee said copies of the letter were sent to the other four county commissioners as well as to Governor W. Preston Lane, jr., Prince Georges Delegate George G. McLeish and State Senator L. Harold Sothoron.

Charges and Replies

The letter's charges and Welch's answers:

1. That Welsh had a "personal interest" in the Keller tract "as an officer of the Hyattsville Building Association."

Welsh said: "I have absolutely no personal interest" in the rezoning action. "I have nothing to gain from it."

2. That the building association has financed "the builder, Edwin W. Feldman, in the past."

Welsh: The building association of which he is president, "has done some financing" for Feldman "in the past—not all of it."

3. That Welsh and his son have "publicly stated that you expect to finance all future Feldman construction."

Welsh: He has not stated that he expected to finance all future Feldman construction. "There is not a word of truth in it."

Further Rebuttal

Amplifying his replies, Welsh said that "if Feldman came into the office he'd be treated with every courtesy, and treated like anyone else. I don't know if the association would be interested. It would all be a matter of good business."

He added that "Feldman has made no application for any loan on this Woodlawn project, nor has he received any commitments. It has never been discussed."

Welsh also said that his son had acted as attorney in a case once before that had come before the County Commissioners, and that when he, Welsh, sr., disqualified himself, he was "criticized to the point where it really hurt."

He said that he was familiar with the type of semi-detached dwellings Feldman proposed to erect and that he believed they were of a high type. Purchasers seeking inexpensive housing would "save about $2000" on them, he said.

Advised Against Rezoning

Melville Feldman, attorney for his brother's company, the Feldman Development Corp., said, "Welsh is in no way connected with this venture, neither morally, financially, nor otherwise. We have not even gotten to the point of putting out these houses for financing. It is still in a formative stage."

Meanwhile, it was learned that Commissioner John H. Beall had advised Commissioner Welsh earlier against voting for the rezoning "on general principles" because "he was not at any of the previous hearings."

The public interest committee also made public yesterday a letter from the county council of American Legion Posts to Harry W. McNamee, president of the board of county commissioners. It asked restoration of the single unit dwelling classification because "this rezoning jeopardizes the value of approximately 1100 adjacent single unit dwellings, the majority of which are veteran owned."

Two Senators Squabble at D. C. Unit's Meeting

Neely, Dworshak In Tardiness Tiff; Bill to Limit Cabs Is Tabled

A sharp flareup between Senators Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), and Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) climaxed yesterday's meeting of the Senate District Committee.

The squabble sprang from Neely's request for immediate action on his bill to set up a District Human Rights Commission but it centered chiefly on Neely's caustic criticism of tardiness by his colleagues on the District Committee—and it died away on a note of agreement.

Prelude of the incident was a series of meetings, last year and this, called by District Committee Chairman Neely and adjourned by him within a few minutes for lack of the seven-member quorum needed to transact legislative business.

The committee mustered a quorum on time yesterday, approved two insurance revision bills, and unanimously tabled a taxicab limitation bill. Then Chairman Neely asked that the group approve his Human Rights Commission bill.

Not on Agenda

Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.) moved that the bill be approved by the District Committee and reported to the Senate.

Dworshak said he was "constrained to object" on the ground that the Neely human rights commission bill did not appear on the typed agenda of the meeting. Neely then said he would withdraw the measure.

Dworshak asked if there was any reason that the bill should not go over to the next meeting.

Neely said that there had been trouble about getting a quorum of the committee to show up at the time meetings were called—he said it might take a month to get another meeting.

Dworshak then snapped that Chairman Neely had been "most unfair and unjust" in lecturing members for tardiness.

Dworshak said he has every intention of participating in the work of the District group, and of rendering the best possible service to the people of the District. He also made it clear that he would not let District affairs take precedence over more important matters.

Neely Denies Lectures

In retort, Neely snapped out a suggestion that Dworshak "get his facts straight."

He said he had not lectured or criticized his committee colleagues, but "I have no intention of sitting here and waiting for you or anybody else for ten minutes after a meeting is called . . .

"If you don't like it you can elect another chairman or I'll get out. We'll make the meeting any time you want—midnight if necessary, but I don't think it's fair to keep four or five members waiting for one or two others."

Dworshak produced the final note of agreement, saying he was in accord with Neely's thought that if no quorum showed up within a reasonable time, the chairman was justified in adjourning the group.

Chairman Neely then announced the next meeting will be at 11 a. m. next Tuesday.

He said later the chief item of business then will be to consider the President's nominations of Miss Mary C. Barlow, 32, and Thomas C. Scalley, 50, to the Municipal Court bench.

Opposition Possible

Possibility of some opposition to Miss Barlow's approval came up yesterday as several committee members privately mentioned she has never actively practiced law here. Miss Barlow, sponsored by Neely, is a legal assistant at Municipal Court.

Nomination for the third vacancy on the bench is "still in the works," according to White House Press Secretary Charles Ross.

Neely said he hopes the Barlow and Scalley nominations will be approved at the Tuesday meeting and sent to the Senate floor for confirmation.

But any local residents or citizen groups wishing to testify for or against the candidates, he emphasized, will be heard, if they come to the Senate District Committee hearing room at the Capitol at 11 a. m. next Tuesday.

During the discussion of the taxicab limitation bill, Senator Harry Darby (R., Kan.) said that if the limitation were ordered it would not be long until cab drivers would be using the new law as an argument for a rate increase.

On the ground that the PUC has power to adjust the cab rates upward, if necessary, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) moved that the bill be tabled. The motion carried unanimously, by voice vote.

Dr. Eisenhower to Talk

Milton S. Eisenhower, president of Kansas State College and president-elect of Pennsylvania State College, will speak before the Washington Alumni Association of Kansas State College at the Burlington Hotel, 7 p. m., Saturday. Dr. Eisenhower will speak on "The State of the College."

Talk of Subpena

House Group Seeks Report On Bribery

The House subcommittee investigating Washington crime wants to examine the compilation of complaints of police corruption, prepared by special gambling grand jury investigators.

"Unless we can get it on a voluntary basis," subcommittee Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) said yesterday, "we will subpena it."

The Washington Post disclosed yesterday that the summary of allegations of police corruption had been prepared, and that more than two dozen policemen had been named in more than 100 unevaluated complaints as being involved in protection payoffs, bribes or other irregularities.

Fay Confirms Existence

United States Attorney George Morris Fay yesterday confirmed existence of the document, but called it a "compilation" not a "report."

"There is a compilation of complaints in this office," Fay said, "but I do not consider it a report to be presented to anybody."

At a press conference yesterday morning, Fay said that "all complaints of any apparent substance charging a violation of the gambling statutes or any related criminal statutes" were submitted to the special gambling grand jury. Fay said the compilation did not contain a statement that a policeman admitted taking a bribe from a well-known gambler, as reported in yesterday's Washington Post story.

Barrett Issues Release

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett also called a special press conference to comment on The Post story, and gave reporters a release.

"The only explanation which can be offered," the release said, "is that specific complaints or allegations regarding a policeman could not be substantiated in any way and were, therefore, ignored by the grand jury."

Departing from his prepared statement, Major Barrett said "I'll tell you one thing. If there is any one who admitted taking a bribe, he doesn't belong on the police force."

2 Liquor Permits Denied, 1 Granted In Prince Georges

The Mount Rainier city council broke even yesterday in its efforts to block issuance of two permits for the sale of alcoholic beverages by the Prince Georges County board of liquor commissioners yesterday at Upper Marlboro.

Despite official protests filed by a delegation headed by Mayor Herbert Reichelt, the Prince Georges board of liquor commissioners granted a permit for off-sale of beer, wine and liquor to the Queenstown Community Drug Store, 3191 Queen's Chapel rd. In another action, however, the board denied a permit for on-sale of beer sought by Ely Friedman at the Mount Rainier Recreation Center, 3239 Rhode Island ave., after the mayor and council members objected to the application.

A delegation of more than 100 persons living near Takoma Park also won a point when it successfully opposed an off-sale wine and liquor license sought by C. G. Beall at University Liquors, University la. and New Hamphire ave. The group contended the area is free of liquor establishments and asked the commissioners not to set a precedent.

Brotherhood Service

The Rev. Richard M. Mussen, pastor of Sherwood Presbyterian Church, will preach at a brotherhood Sabbath service of the Northeast Hebrew Congregation at Sherwood Church, 22d st. and Rhode Island ave. ne. at 8:30 p. m. today.

Court Voids Torre's Will; Heirs Stand

The will of Andrew D. Torre, 41-year-old Washington lawyer and real estate operator who died February 10 leaving a $219,853 estate, yesterday was declared invalid by District Court Judge Burnita Matthews.

Her action, however, will not affect the interests of the chief beneficiaries named in the will—Torre's widow, Mrs. Catherine Torre, and his sister, Miss Beatrice Torre, both of 5401 Connecticut ave. nw.

Both were named to share equally in the will and under the law applying to persons dying without leaving a valid will, their status will remain virtually unchanged.

According to Attorney Godfrey L. Munter, named administrator of the estate, both had agreed to carry out the terms of the will whether or not it was admitted to probate.

The will was rejected by Judge Matthews on the ground that the witnesses had not signed it in the presence of the deceased.

An estate of $135,925 was left by the late Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, former head of the Methodist Church in the Washington area, it was disclosed yesterday. His will was admitted for probate in Montgomery County Orphans Court.

Bishop Hughes, who was 83, died February 12. He had lived with a daughter, Mrs. Carline H. Harban, at 691 Rollingwood dr., Chevy Chase, Md.

The will specified $1000 bequests to Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, and De Pauw College, Greencastle, Ind. After that, the estate is to be divided equally between five children.

Rev. Van Schaick Estate Report Is Filed

Schoharie, N. Y., Feb. 23 (Spl.). Personal property of the Rev. Dr. John van Schaick, jr, pastor-emeritus of the Universalist National Memorial Church of Washington, D. C., was appraised at $98,823.70 in a court report filed today. Dr. van Schaick died May 17, 1949, in Washington, D. C.

Principal beneficiary of the will is Dr. van Schaick's widow, Mrs. Julia Romaine van Schaick, of 1840 Mintwood pl. nw., Washington, who receives half the personal property plus life use of two Schoharie County farms.

The other half goes to 30 individuals.

Keleher Griped at $80,000 Cost Of Friendly Pat, Witness Says

John B. (Dapper Jack) Keleher, who claims that at 68 he is too old for romance, admitted that in 1946 he "patted" a woman friend at Miami Beach, a witness testified yesterday.

The District Court witness was Mrs. Joan Langlotz, 21, called by Dapper Jack's wife, Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, 51, to bolster her divorce case against the estranged husband.

Mrs. Langlotz told Judge Charles F. McLaughlin that in March, 1946, Keleher met her on the Klingle bridge and described a day in Florida when he was seen on the beach by his wife.

Mrs. Langlotz said Keleher told her "he couldn't understand why Mrs. Keleher took all his money just because he patted a woman in the water."

Mrs. Keleher had testified that Keleher had slapped the "hip" of Mrs. Dorothy S. Blake, 46-year-old "other woman" in the case.

Keleher denies that he ever engaged in misconduct with women or did "anything any other man wouldn't do," on his annual trips to Florida. He claims that after the 1946 Florida trip, his wife took $80,000 from their safe deposit boxes. That is the reason he is willing to get a divorce, on a ground of desertion, he says. Mrs. Keleher also wants a divorce, charging cruelty.

Conclusion of the case was delayed yesterday until today when final arguments are scheduled.

Beer Cans Lead to Arrests Of 12 in Theft of 89 Cases

Unusual piles of empty cans stacked along two alleys brought the end of a bargain beer bonanza in Alexandria, it was revealed yesterday.

As a result, two boys and one woman are in jail, and nine other adults were fined and given suspended jail sentences.

Inspector Russell Hawes, chief of detectives, said a Gunther Brewing Co. warehouse at 1112 1st st., was broken into on February 11, February 13 and February 17, with a total loss of 89 cases of canned ale and beer. On subsequent days, police noticed unusually large piles of empty beer cans in alleys along Patrick and Montgomery sts.

The officers then tracked down two boys, 12 and 14 years old, who, Hawes said, admitted the breakings.

Ten adults—six women and four men—were rounded up and charged with buying the beer illegally, and some of them with contributing to delinquency of minors. Nine pleaded guilty before Judge James R. Duncan in Alexandria Civil and Police Court. They received suspended six-month jail sentences, and were fined $54.25 each.

They were Bertha Archie, 33, of 925 N. Patrick st.; Alice Cleveland, 24, 916 N. Patrick st.; Helen Wright, 32, 1016 Montgomery st.; Daniel Greene, 29, 927 N. Patrick st.; Francis Adams, 33, 818 Montgomery st.; Elsie Kyer, 28, 922 N. Patrick st.; Hattie Robinson, 42, 931 N. Patrick st.; Henry Cleveland, 31, 916 N. Patrick st.; and Tom Garner, 54, 919 Montgomery st.

Corrinne Taylor, 35, of 820 Montgomery st., pleaded innocent. She was convicted on both charges and received a 30-day jail sentence and a fine of $158.50.

The two boys were turned over to juvenile authorities.

Group to Meet Today On Good Friday Rites

The committee for the Three House observance of Good Friday will meet at 8:30 p. m. today in the Jefferson Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

The Rev. Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of National City Christian Church, is chairman of the committee. Co-chairmen are the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Catholic Archbishop of Washington, the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, and Bishop Charles W. Flint, Methodist Bishop of the Washington area.

Man Burned as Cable Hits High Tension Wire

An 18-year-old bricklayer was slightly burned about 10:30 a. m. yesterday in an accident which cut off electric power to 4000 Arlington and Alexandria customers about a half an hour.

James Thomson, of Weekstown, N. J., suffered burns of the right foot and left hand when a cable he was handling was blown against a high tension wire. He was working on Arlington's new incinerator plant under construction at No. 1 highway and Four Mile Run dr.

Rally of 1800 Launches Drive For Red Cross

A rally of 1800 campaign volunteers yesterday opened the 1950 Red Cross drive for $1,039,000 in the Washington metropolitan area.

The campaigners heard Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) and Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., praise the Red Cross services in peace and war, while Daniel W. Bell, local general chairman, stressed their potential importance in the event of A-bomb or H-bomb attack.

Bell said that if these weapons are ever used against us, the blood program, home nursing service and first-aid program of the Red Cross would be of great benefit to the entire country.

Blood Donations Cited

Bell, president of the American Security & Trust Co., said many Government workers give their time to Red Cross work and some have on occasion used their annual leave to carry out emergency assignments.

Patients of 40 hospitals in this area are now receiving human blood without charge through the Red Cross, he said. As more donors join in this program, it is planned to have enough blood for everyone at all times, with extra amounts on hand should disaster strike, he said.

Senator Smith, who described Red Cross services in the 1947 forest fire disaster in her home State, said 61 percent of the amount raised in metropolitan Washington will remain here to provide local aid.

Gray said patients in the 137 VA hospitals received from Red Cross workers personal services and the "home touch" which "we paid hands cannot provide."

Webb Presides

Undersecretary of State James E. Webb, vice chairman of the Government unit in the drive, took the place of Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan, chairman, in presiding at the rally.

The campaign here will be carried on by the six District area chapters. Local chairmen, serving under Bell, are Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, for Montgomery County, Md.; W. A. Sherman, Fairfax County, Va.; R. H. Bogle jr., Alexandria, Va.; Carrington P. Stahl, Arlington County, Va. and Pearce L. Wolfe, Prince Georges County, Md.

The first report luncheon will be held at 12:30 p.m. next Friday at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce building.

Costianes Funeral Rites Held

Funeral services for John P. G. Costianes, 56, of 6501 6th st. nw., partner in the Trio Restaurant, 1537 17th st. nw., were held yesterday afternoon in St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox Church. Burial was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. He died Monday night.

Mr. Costianes

Mr. Costianes figured in the news in August, 1947, when his auto was shipped to Brazil through an error by a Brazilian government aide here.

The auto was parked on a Northwest street about the time a similar car was to have been delivered nearby. A Brazilian government clerk drove the wrong car away and had it sent to Brazil. In return, however, Mr. Costianes received a new auto.

Mr. Costianes died at the 17th st. restaurant Monday night after he collapsed of a heart attack and struck his head on the floor. A fractured skull was the cause of death, according to the coroner.

A native of Greece, Mr. Costianes came to the United States 35 years ago. He had lived in Washington about 20 years. After working in various restaurants here, he became a partner in the Trio Restaurant in 1941.

He was a member of Trintzinian Club, a Greek society, and St. Sophia's Church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Grace E. Costianes; two brothers, George of Washington, and Thomas P. Costianes of Greece, and a sister, Mrs. Pota Comuntsis of Greece.

Count de Chappedelaine

H. J. Froelich, Court Clerk, Tailor, Dies

Harry J. Froehlich, 70, former custom tailor and municipal warrant clerk since 1941, died yesterday at George Washington Hospital from cancer. He had been ill since November.

Mr. Froehlich

As owner - manager of Mertz & Mertz, he operated the custom - tailoring concern at 405 11th st. nw. and in Baltimore.

Born raised and educated in Baltimore, he came here shortly after the turn of the century, and as a youth of 21 entered the tailoring field when suits sold for $10.

His stores occupied three different addresses here before cheaper and more plentiful factory-made clothing finally closed his business just prior to World War II.

After retiring from the clothing business, Mr. Froehlich went to the District Police Court as a clerk.

A Fourth Degree member of the Knights of Columbus and of the Washington Council, Mr. Froehlich also belonged to the Elks, the Oldest Inhabitants, and the Holy Name and the St. Vincent de Paul Societies of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Pine st. and Park rd. nw.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rose Froehlich; a son, Willard H. Froehlich, an auditor in the General Accounting Office, both of the 1719 Upshur st. nw., address, and a brother, the Rev. Robert J. Froehlich of the St. Anthony of Padua Church in Baltimore.

A requiem mass will be sung at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart at 10 a. m. Tuesday. Burial will follow at Cedar Hill mausoleum.

Guy C. Cosway, Insurance Man, Dies, Jeep Goes Off Bridge

News of the accidental death of Guy C. Cosway, 47, manager of the Washington office of the Fidelity and Deposit Co. of Maryland, was received here yesterday.

Mr. Cosway died Wednesday evening when a jeep he was driving went through the rail of a bridge over the South River, near Riva, Md., where he made his home. The accident, to which there were no witnesses, apparently occurred about 7:55 p. m., during a drizzle.

The jeep, with his body still in it, was pulled out 90 minutes later. Artificial respiration was unavailing. Dr. John M. Claffy, Anne Arundel County medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental drowning.

A native of Devonshire, England, Mr. Cosway was with the Fidelity and Deposit Co., for 20 years. He had been manager of the office here for the past three years. Prior to that, he was in the firm's offices at Philadelphia, San Francisco, and in the home office at Baltimore.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Harry C. Black, wife of the board chairman of the A. S. Abell Co., which publishes the Baltimore Sun papers; a brother, Sir William R. Halliday, of London; and a daughter, Constance, who makes her home with him at Riva but was away at school at the time of the accident. His wife, the former Mary Roman, of Cumberland, Md., died in 1947.

Lavern Roach's Death Leads to Probe of Fight

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., Feb. 23.—Consarn it, says Clark Griffith, his Washington team wasn't that bad a ball club even though it finished eighth last season. "We didn't get the most out of it," he is saying.

It was a year Griffith would like to forget, particularly those 39 games in which the Nats were beaten by one-run margins. To help himself forget it, he fired Manager Joe Kuhel and hired Bucky Harris.

POVICH

The old gentleman is still annoyed by one-run defeats. "We didn't win a fair share of those games," he says, "and you can't blame it all on the pitching. If we can give that same club a little bit extra this year, we'll be a lot tougher."

One of the extra assets Griffith thinks his club will have is Harris. "Bucky never gets panicky in that manager's seat," he says. "He has been around too long. He gets everything out of a team that's in it. I feel I knew what I was doing when I brought him back to Washington."

GRIFFITH was plainly dissatisfied with Kuhel, though he has never said so. There were polite good-bys when at the end of the season the Washington club president announced that he was not renewing Kuhel's contract. But long before he had come to the decision to get a new manager.

Kuhel's number actually was up after one night game in August when young Dick Weik lost a 2-1 heartbreaker to the Cleveland Indians in Griffith Stadium. The Indians got their first run when Rookie Outfielder John Simmons misjudged a fly in left field, and tied the score.

That wasn't what Griffith was writhing about. With the score tied at 1-1 in the twelfth, Larry Doby singled to short left center and stretched it to a double when young Simmons lazily returned the ball to the infield. The Indians won the game by scoring Doby from second.

"Harris would have had one of our good defensive outfielders in there at that point with the score tied up," said Griffith. "Bucky thinks about all those things."

GRIFFITH'S installation of new seats in left field that shortens home run territory by 19 feet may not be a permanent arrangement, he says. "I'm not aiming to set up any cheap home runs. We'll still have the longest left field in the league. But if it will help my club more than it helps the opposition, the seats will stay in."

He'll jerk 'em out of there, though, if visiting right-handed hitters start to overpower the Nats. "But the whole pitching picture in the American League has changed," says Griffith. "Harris and I have discussed that. The league's pitching strength is left-handed these days. We've counted 22 southpaw pitchers they can throw at us, which means we'll try to have our own right-handed hitters in the lineup."

The Nats' boss is hoping that his new move will improve the extra-base hit production of such as Eddie Yost, Al Kozar, Al Evans and Sam Mele. "They're all long fly-ball hitters and we'll be giving them something better to shoot at. You'd be surprised how much a ball player's hitting improves when he has a target. If it doesn't get results, we'll put the old fences back."

GRIFFITH has assigned Harris a top mission during the Nats' seven-week training routine in Florida—to make a big leaguer out of Gil Coan. "Bucky works well with young players, and if anybody can get Coan squared away, he will. Coan has complexes when he goes up to that plate. Bucky knows it, but he likes the fellow's possibilities."

Harris has already made plain his first tactic with Coan. "I'm going to tell him he's our left fielder, and to stop worrying about making the team. There's nothing wrong with his outfielding right now. He buckled down and made a good outfielder of himself. If we can do the same with his hitting, Coan would be a great one."

Harris is going to ask Coan, first off, to stop trying to knock the ball out of the lot. "With that speed of his, he's dangerous any time he drives a ball into the dirt. He gives the infielder the jitters just by standing up there. It induces a lot of fumbles. Once he realizes they fear him, he'll have the confidence he needs. And that confidence will lead to solid hits—I hope."

Head Injury Fatal After Knockdown In Tenth

By Jack Hand

New York, Feb. 23. (AP)—A two-pronged investigation was ordered today into the death of Middleweight Boxer Lavern Roach of Plainview, Tex., who was fatally injured last night in a St. Nicholas Arena bout with Georgie Small of Brooklyn.

The District Attorney's office scheduled a full investigation tomorrow of boxing's first fatality of 1950.

Detective Lieutenant Henry Devlin of the New York City police said all persons concerned with the bout would be questioned. He said he saw the match and "there does not appear to be any negligence at this time."

Chairman Eddie Eagan of the New York State Athletic Commission called an open hearing for tomorrow morning. Eagan said a preliminary examination indicated no infraction of the commission rules.

In Deep Coma at End

Roach, a handsome ex-Marine who was boxing's outstanding prospect three years ago, died at 12:50 p. m. (EST) today at St. Clair's Hospital as the result of brain injuries received in a tenth round knockout loss to Small.

"The patient was in a deep coma," the hospital report read, "and there was respiratory failure with final cessation of heart action due to the after-effects of a cerebral hemorrhage and brain damage."

Huddled at the bedside in stunned silence were the boxer's wife, Evelyn, and his manager, Johnny Abood, who handled Roach's career since his days with the Cherry Point, N. C., Marines. Yesterday was his twenty-fourth birthday.

Dr. Vincent A. Nardiello, New York State Athletic Commission physician, and four other doctors attended the stricken athlete after his last fight. Dr. Nardiello remained with the patient through the night until his death.

Only a handful, 1832, waded through sleet and snow to see the middleweight battle in the ancient midtown club. Hundreds of thousands and perhaps millions of shocked television viewers saw the tragic ending of the fight at 1:57 of the tenth over a CBS network telecast.

Cameras focused on Roach's corner for several minutes as his handlers and doctors worked over him following the knockout.

Ring Magazine records show 18 fight deaths last year, nine in the United States of which five were pros. Enrico Bertola, who died October 5 after losing to Lee Oma at Buffalo was the last in New York State.

Eagan said Br. J. A. McLean, a neuro-surgeon, advised after the injury that surgery would be of no avail.

Small, shaken by the fatal accident, said, "I thought he was fresher than I was."

Later Small said that he had canceled a scheduled appearance for a preliminary match on the Charlie Fusari-Jimmy Flood pro-

Unhurt in Football, Injured in Gym

Irish End Dies Of Broken Neck

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 23 (AP).—Charles Raymond (Ray) Espenan, 24-year-old Notre Dame football end, died late today of a broken neck he suffered in a gymnastics demonstration.

Unhurt in four years of big-time collegiate football, Espenan was injured attempting a back flip on a trampoline in Central High School gymnasium here Monday. The demonstration was part of his practice teaching as a senior in the Notre Dame school of physical education.

Death came in St. Joseph's Hospital. At the bedside were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Espenan of New Orleans, and a brother, Pierre, a pre-medical student at Notre Dame. Edward (Moose) Krause, Notre Dame director of athletics, was sitting outside the hospital in his automobile.

University officials sought to notify Coach Frank Leahy, reported fishing from a yacht off Miami, Fla.

ESPENAN was a member of the Irish gridiron squad throughout its string of 38 games without defeat—a string that is still unbroken.

Espenan was a fine end but spent much of his time on the bench because he was the replacement for Leon Hart, Notre Dame's great All-America wingman. Records show Espenan played 100 minutes last fall.

He earned six letters in football and track at Holy Cross High School in New Orleans. He spent 23 months in the Navy and served in the Philippines.

He had a talent for verse, teammates said, and brightened up road trips with rhymes about humorous incidents on the football field.

Lavern Was Symbol to Home Town

Plainview, Tex., Feb. 23 (AP).—It was difficult for them to believe—the people who knew Lavern Roach best—that their idol was dead.

It wasn't that the Plainview-born fighter usually came out the winner when he climbed into the ring.

Roach was more than a fighter here—he was a symbol of clean living. He was courteous, quick with a smile; he was the kind of young man all Plainview citizens wanted their sons to be.

Roach, the most famous athlete this city of the Texas plains country ever had, died today of head injuries received in a 10-round fight in New York last night. Roach bowed to George Small of Brooklyn. He died from the effects of a cerebral hemorrhage and brain damage, said attending physicians.

Lavern's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Roach, were both in bed from the shock.

Popular in High School

Roach was popular in Plainview High School where he played football and started his amateur ring career. As a flyweight and bantamweight he competed in several Golden Gloves meets. He never won a title but several times he was selected most popular for his courage and sportsmanship.

In 1941 he lost in the finals of an eight-State tournament at Albuquerque, N. Mex. But here he met Nat Fleischer, publisher of Ring magazine. Fleischer, who refereed most of the bouts, voted Roach the most promising fighter. Lavern talked to him about his dream—of fighting in New York. Fleischer advised him to take his time.

Roach graduated from high school early—in January, 1943—in order to enter the Marines at 17.

His rise in Marine boxing circles was rapid. The team met all comers and dominated the Golden Gloves.

Started Career in D. C.

In his 30 fights while in the Marines, Roach never came close to losing.

Roach started his professional career in Washington D. C., before he got out of the Marines. His defeat by Marcel Cerdan March 12, 1948, was the second loss of 25 pro starts. It was the first time he was knocked out. He was on his feet when the referee stopped the fight.

Plainview fans who flew to New York to see the Roach-Cerdan fight said the Texan apparently suffered no ill effects from the Cerdan beating.

Fordham Tops Hoyas; G. W. Beats Quantico

Moffatt Sparks GW to 57-54 Win

Quantico, Va., Feb. 23.—George Washington U. won its 14th game in 22 starts, 57-54, over the Quantico Marines here tonight.

The Colonials, led by Forward Johnny Moffatt, came from behind in the second half to erase a 32-26 Quantico halftime advantage.

Art Cerra's free throws and two field goals, coupled with Gene Witkin's field goal, gave G. W. its lead, 33-32, in the opening minutes of the third quarter.

Harry Woods' field goal for Quantico put the Marines back in the lead, 34-33, but Cerra came back with another basket to put the Colonials back on top, 35-34.

Quantico took over and held the lead until the last three minutes of the game. Howard Hoffman gave G. W. a 52-51 edge with a free throw and the Colonials had the game sewed up.

Quantico has won 36 games and lost 13. Moffatt was high for G. W. with 17 points. Center Cy Waldrop of Quantico was the game's high scorer with 28.

Georgetown Bows, 64-63; Carlson High

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—Fordham University's Rams pulled out a 64-63 victory tonight over a hustling Georgetown University basketball team.

With the lead changing back and forth throughout the game, Fordham finally pulled in front at the 37½-minute mark to stay. John Brown and Thomas O'Keefe scored for Georetown in the final 30 seconds, but the Hoyas couldn't quite close the gap.

Bill Carlson, 6-foot-8 Fordham center, sparked his club to its 13th victory by dumping in 27 points. O'Keefe had 19.

The score was tied 11 times in the first half, with Georgetown leading, 34-29, at the intermission, after going ahead with three minutes left.

Miami Fines Pep $500 for 'Not Trying'

Miami, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—Willie Pep, world featherweight champion, was fined $500 by the Miami Boxing Commission today for a poor showing in a 10-round non-title bout last night with Jimmy Warren of Brooklyn.

Willie Pep

Pep, from Hartford, Conn., waltzed to a 10-round decision in the dull exhibition which went the full 10 rounds.

A crowd of 3710 spectators who paid $10,625 to see the match expressed disappointment. Sports writers described it as "little more than a workout" with Pep awarded every round.

Warren was fined $250.

"Pep didn't display too much of his titular accomplishments and he didn't have to," wrote Guy Butler, Miami Daily News sports editor. "There was a suspicion that he wasn't trying to halt the wary New Yorker who took few chances of exposing his chin."

Miller Recalls He Told Roach To Quit Boxing

Col. Heinie Miller, executive secretary of the National Boxing Association, said yesterday he had advised Lavern Roach to get out of the boxing game in 1948, the Associated Press reported.

Roach died yesterday of injuries suffered in his knockout loss to George Small in New York Wednesday night.

"It was after Roach dropped an eight-round decision to John Hansbury of Washington," said Miller, a retired Marine colonel, "that I talked with Roach, one marine to another.

"It wasn't anything official. It was a personal thing and I told Roach that he ought to quit.

"Roach promised me then that he would quit. And he did for a while."

Davis Gets Out of Army; To Play Pro

"Mr. Outside" will actually be there soon.

Lieut. Glenn W. Davis, outside running halfback of West Point's fabulous Blanchard-Davis tandem, will become a civilian June 3.

Army headquarters here announced it had accepted his resignation and that he would be free to "follow civilian pursuits on March 1," when his terminal leave begins.

Reached at Fort Monroe, Va., Davis revealed he had already made plans for the future.

"I'll definitely play pro football and I also expect to go into business near my home," he said.

He's been drafted by the Los Angeles Rams and said he would talk terms with them next week when he goes home, to Cleremont, Calif.

Ball Clubs Interested

Several major baseball teams are also interested in his services, Davi revealed, but he said he'd "probably not play baseball, concentrating on football and business."

Davis was permitted to resign under a policy allowing West Point graduates to resign their commissions after serving three years. He and his famous running mate, Felix (Doc) Blanchard, were graduated in 1947. Blanchard is now stationed in Alaska.

Davis said that his knee, which he injured two years ago, "is as good as ever and I'm in tip-top shape."

Hitch Cost Glenn

He said he had no regrets over Army life, but estimated that his three-year hitch had reduced his cash vaalue in football or baseball "by at least 50 percent."

"If I had been permitted to resign sooner, I'm sure I would have received considerably more for playing football than I will get," he said.

Says D. C. Boxing Board Doctor

Incompetent Handlers Contribute to Fight Deaths

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

"Roach was dragged into his corner and seconds attempted to revive him with smelling salts. They failed, and Roach was carried to an ambulance."—From the United Press story of the Lavern Roach-George Small fight in New York Wednesday night. Roach died yesterday of fight injuries.

INCOMPETENT trainers, seconds, handlers and referees are contributing to such tragedies as that which befell Lavern Roach, Dr. Leon Gordon, chief medical examiner of the District Boxing Commission, said last night.

Roach

He said:

"Stricken fighters must be treated by doctors, not by former fighters and gymnasium hangers-on who don't know what they're doing. They're dealing with human lives and they aren't equipped.

"The use of ammonia or smelling salts in counteracting drowsiness or in the recovery phases from loss of consciousness is wrong.

"The boxer gets a chokey sensation; his blood pressure is elevated and any area of hemorrhage is stimulated to bleed more, causing greater damage. The same stimulation of blood flow occurs in massaging the neck, shaking the head and slapping the face. There may be attendant injuries about the head and slapping the face. There may be attendant injuries about the head, neck or back which will be further aggravated by indiscreet handling."

Dr. Gordon's views on the subject are emphatic. He delivered a paper, "Head Injuries in Boxing," to the annual convention of the National Boxing Association in Havana last November. Member States were asked to put his proposals into practice.

Dr. Gordon's observations were based on watching fights for 22 years and serving as examiner for the District Commission for the last five years.

He has made an exhaustive study of head injuries to fighters. He's seen fighters knocked down and out and he has watched cornermen—seconds, managers and handlers—try to revive their stricken mealticket. Their methods, he says, are inhuman.

In his paper to the NBA, Dr. Gordon stressed these "musts" for the treatment of boxers who have been knocked out:

1. Let him remain on the floor of the ring and remove his mouthpiece;

2. Do Not: (a) rub his neck; (b) shake his head; (c) slap his face; (d) try to arouse him with ammonia or any other inhalant.

Above all, Dr. Gordon insists, keep trainers, handlers and seconds away and let a doctor and only a doctor treat him. Doctors know best.

If Roach had been fighting in a Washington ring, his handlers would NOT have been permitted to "drag him into his corner." Washington abides by the NBA regulation that cornermen are not permitted to touch their fighter in case of a knockout, only a doctor.

"But often times," Gordon said, "even when the doctor arrives it's too late. Trainers and handlers and referees should be schooled and educated, taught when to be able to tell their fighter had had enough. Most men who work in a fighter's corner are interested in only one thing—keeping their fighter on his feet.

"They don't know when a fighter has had enough. They can't look into his eyes and give him a few simple and quick tests to see if he knows what he's doing. If he's breathing and is able to stand on his feet, he's passed their physical examination. It's cruel. Many permanent injuries and even deaths could be prevented if the handlers knew what they were doing.

"Referees should be educated, too. They are the sole judge of a man's fitness after the fight starts. They should be taught to determine when a man has had enough. He doesn't have to be knocked down and senseless to prove it.

"Our prefight examinations aren't thorough enough. We check heart, blood pressure and reflexes in the brief time permitted. What I would like to see done would be for ring physicians to make a comment on each fighter, submit it to NBA headquarters. His comment would include such things as the fighter's reaction to taking a blow, especially a blow to the head.

"Doctors characteristically watch for such things, not referees. If the fighter appeared to be hurt, our comment would say so and instruct the examining physician in the town where the fighter next appeared to check his reflexes and give him a more thorough examination, particularly of the head.

"The way most fighters are handled reminds me of that classic remark by a fight manager whose boy was getting the daylights kicked out of him. He said, in all seriousness, 'Go out there and fight, they can't hurt us.'"

3 Ball Clubs Wire Views On Peanuts

BILL SEALS, no relation to those in San Francisco, is trying valiantly to keep the humble peanut in the news.

It isn't just a case of sticking up for an underdog, this guy Seals actually works for peanuts. He's president of the National Peanut Council here.

Mr. Seals just sat back and beamed when the recent peanut controversy broke in San Francisco. Paul Fagan, president of the Seals' Pacific Coast League team, threatened to ban the sale of peanuts because the pesky shells sent cleaning costs soaring.

The ban may have been synthetic but the reaction was real and Fagan quickly capitulated.

These widely circulated peanut stories inspired Washington's Mr. Seals to try his luck. Se he wired the 16 major league clubs for comment "expressing high regard for peanuts at ball games."

Cleveland General Manager Hank Greenberg (or Press Agent Marsh Samuel who does a good job of keeping Hank's name in print) wired: "After making comprehensive study on peanut situation, we find the best solution is to have fans eats Shells as roughage.

"Suggest your National peanut Council begin educatinal program immediately. Offer my services as guinea pig."

Playing it straight, the Nats' Clark Griffith wired from Orlando, Fla., "No ball game would be complete without peanuts. Chewing them helps quiet nerves during exciting games."

Frank Lane, Chicago White Sox general manager, wired, "Despite fact Chisox spend $25,000 yearly to clean park, most of it getting up shells, we don't feel we'd have a real baseball game without the gorgeous goober." JACK WALSH.

Cheeseman Has Cracked Cheekbone

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

American University yesterday dropped boxing permanently from its athletic program because three members of its eight-man squad are out with injuries.

Athletic Director Staff Cassell said that abandonment of the sport had nothing to do with the death yesterday of boxer Lavern Roach in New York.

He said that the Eagles have canceled their three remaining matches of the season because Middleweight Joe Cheeseman has a cracked cheekbone, Lightweight Walt Gallagher has a chipped elbow and Welterweight Jim Schnitzer has an injured hand.

Drop Sport "For Good"

[Earlier this season, Georgetown University canceled its boxing schedule because not enough candidates turned up for the opening practice. The Hoyas and American U. were supposed to box each other.]

"We will not schedule any matches for next year," said Cassell. "We're dropping the sport for good."

"There has been no real student interest here in our four-year trial of boxing," he said. "We've been barely able to scrape up enough men to represent us in each weight class.

"It's been embarrassing for us to have to forfeit bouts when one of our men was hurt. We had no reserves."

In four years, American has won only 2 matches, lost 14 and tied 2. This season, the Eagles lost, 8-0, to Army; 5½-2½, to Western Maryland, and, 6½-1½, to CCNY.

The Eagles were scheduled to box Western Maryland here Saturday, Maryland's "B" squad March 11 and Catholic U., March 25 but all three matches have been canceled.

Jim Petro, who became coach of the mittmen this winter, remains on the physical education staff on a part-time basis. He is in charge of the two American University cafeterias.

Terps Promote Coach Meek

Bill Meek, head freshman football coach at Maryland for three years, was named varsity backfield coach yesterday.

Meek, who quarterbacked the University of Tennessee for three years, replaces Babe Woods, recently resigned.

Warren Giese, part-time football coach for the past two seasons, has been hired on a full-time basis and will coach the Maryland freshmen. He will be assisted by Jimmy LaRue, Terrapin varsity halfback for the past three seasons.

LaRue was appointed to the physical education staff yesterday by Dean Lester Fraley, head of the physical education department.

Break for Fat Man

Haight Finds Wheel to Fit at Auto Show

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

AH, THERE'S GOOD news today—good news for me and my fat-feathered friends.

It's only a matter of time now before we will cease to be embarrassed by our size when driving a car.

Haight

If you are a member of the Jolly Fat Man's Club you're familiar with having your tummy rubbed by the steering wheel. If you know a member, perhaps you've snickered when he slid the seat back as far as it would go.

But it won't be long now until we can stop carrying a towel to keep the wheel from soiling our light, summer slacks.

Yesterday, at the Armory for the auto show, I learned that a steering wheel has been invented that works on an extension basis—pull it to you or push it away.

No more squeezing and rolling out of cars. We lardy guys can push the wheel in and step out, just like those fellows who ain't proud of their eating, if you know what I mean.

BUT that's not all I learned from Milton Marion, for 17 years among the topflight auto race drivers and now the owner of the biggest individual racing car "stable" in the country.

I refer to his collection of expensive horseless buggies—one he's exhibiting at the show cost $20,000—as a "stable" for the reason that Marion's present status in auto racng almost parallels that of a horse owner.

He has two midgets, two speedway cars and one sprint car that shoot for the prize money, just as Calumet and Greentree vie horse purses. The counterpart of jockeys are ace drivers like Bill Holland, the 1949 Indianapolis 500-mile winner, Emil Andres and Walt Brown who handle the Marion cars.

MARION, now 42, owned his first racing car at 15.

"I wrecked a friend's Model T Ford and had to buy the remains," he said. "I stripped it down and put in a new rear-end and thought I was ready for action. However, I had put the gears in wrong and was looking out the side to back it out, when I suddenly went forward and flattened the front against the garage wall.

"I sneaked a few races on small, dirt tracks, unknown to my father, who was opposed, and then took a job as an apprentice mechanic. Pop finally came around to my side when he heard I had won a Long Island race with a revamped stock car."

Although Marion drove at Indianapolis over the period from 1931 to 1938, he failed to finish in the top flight, but his AAA record shows a long string of victories on other tracks.

HE'S NEVER competed in other than speedway or stock cars and says the midget fellows are of a different species.

"The relaxed, quiet type of drivers are the fellows for long distances and larger cars. The hell-bent-for-election guys with keen reflexes go for the midgets," he explained.

Marion has been "through the fence," in race-driver parlance, a couple of times, but has never suffered more than a few scratches.

He rates his closest shave as one at Roosevelt Speedway in a trial run with Writer Bob Considine as a passenger.

"Bob insisted upon a real speed outing, so I tried to oblige," he said. "I went into a high bank and failed to take into consideration Considine's added weight. The car began to give in the back but luckily, we were bounced out of the skid by hitting the top guard rail.

"When we came in, Bob was scared half to death. He didn't know it, but I was scared three-quarters to death."

Roach's Death Brings Probe

gram in Madison Square Garden, March 10.

Roach, boxing's "Rookie of the Year" in 1947, was on a comeback when tragedy struck. Rushed into a match with Marcel Cerdan, March 12, 1948, Roach suffered a bad beating that almost ended his career. This was a few months before Cerdan won the middleweight title.

Scorecards of both judges and Referee Frank Fullam had the Texan out front in the first nine rounds of his last fight. Early in the battle he outpunched Small with a solid left hook although he appeared to be off in his timing.

A terrific right hand punch to the jaw, just as Roach was starting a left hook, smashed the Texan to the canvas for a count of nine in the last round. Roach, acting on instinct alone, followed through with his hook, spun weakly and flopped flat on his back. Out cold for seven counts, he bounced up jerkily, like a mechanical doll to beat Fullam's count.

Seconds later, Small battered Roach to the canvas again and he collapsed dat on his back. Referee Fullam quickly stopped the fight without a count, reaching down to remove the boy's mouthpiece. Dr. Alexander Schiff, a commission doctor, was in the ring immediately.

After Roach was half-dragged to his corner he came to and opened his eyes. Talking to his trainer he said, "Damn it, this would happen."

Two or three times he started to get up but sagged and sat down on the stool. Dr. Nardiello quickly gave him an injection and ordered a stretcher.

Roach was placed under an oxygen tent and fed through the veins. He was unconscious from the time he left the ring on a stretcher.

They Should Never Ground 'Lightning'

By Richard L. Coe

WHEN IT HITS the air, the Warner's "Chain Lightning" has some excitement, but when concerned with earthly doings, golly, gee whiz, it's terrible.

Humphrey Bogart is a B-17 pilot turned jet tester in the supersonic, and though he looked like a Buck Rogers cousin most of the time, the air stuff is twenty-first century-minded.

But the story you have to put up with is something else again, and Liam O'Brien and Vincent Evans should clearly have their heads examined. They tell you how Bogart and Eleanor Parker met in wartime London, but had their romance broken off when Bogey's superior transferred him back to the States rather than grant him permission to marry Eleanor.

Comes peace, and Bogey is stone broke. War Pal Richard Whorf gets him a job as test pilot for a new jet plane, and who does Bogey run into but Eleanor, now a secretary at the jet factory, evidently at Whorf's behest.

Things get drearily complicated, not to say totally fuzzy, with Eleanor's behavior making no sense. The melodramatic shenanigans are totally hopeless, and Miss Parker is, too.

Furthermore, you have to put up with as juvenile dialogue and heroics as you can imagine. Too bad the writers, director and producer didn't get a glimpse of the more lifelike, natural styles of "Battleground" and "Twelve O'Clock High" before embarking on their outmoded speeches.

The air plot boils down to an effort of Bogey's to prove that the pilot ejector safety device invented by Whorf was a step forward, though it didn't work out when its inventor tried it. This comes after Bogey has defied nature and science in a jet flight from Nome, across the Pole, to Washington.

The cast is better than the script deserves. Bogart, needless to say, is almost (but never quite) able to make you forget the Rover Boy spirit of the script, and Raymond Massey is fine as the manufacturer who thinks more highly of sales than human beings. Whorf's inventor is energetically contrived, but Miss Parker is from hunger.

From this don't get the idea I'm against jet-propulsion. Only people.

"CHAIN LIGHTNING." Screen play by Liam O'Brien and Vincent Evans. Suggested by a story by J. Redmond Prior. Directed by Stuart Heisler. Produced by Anthony Veiller for Warner Bros. At the Warner.

WANTED FOR "ANNA." Irene Dunne, who rose to movie celebrity after taking over on stage for Norma Terris in Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" is being paged to recreate her film role in the Rodgers-Hammerstein musical stage version of "Anna and the King of Siam," with Rex Harrison in the costarring role he played in the movies. Here's Miss Dunne admiring the Brotherhood Week poster now on display in the local theaters CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S drama group will be on the air Saturday at 12:15 for Ed Moore's Theater Time feature on WGAY . . . For the campus theater patrons, the speech and drama department is now working on a production of "Oedipus Rex," which will open its two-week run March 17.

THE KENSINGTON Players offer their second production tonight and tomorrow at the Kensington Junior High auditorium at 8:30 . . . The play is Emlyn Williams' melodrama, "A Murder Has Been Arranged," with Catherine Herder directing.

TONIGHT also brings another group's activity—the Thespian Study Club playing "The Royal Family" at Armstrong High, where it will be repeated tomorrow night at 8:40 . . . In the cast under Isadore Miles' direction are: Carolyn Stewart, Juanita Fletcher, Elaine Deane, William Brown, Noel Compton and Joseph Haskins.

CONNEE BOSWELL takes over the mike today and tomorrow at the show in the Armory . . . Connee will appear at 3, 6 and 9 p. m. . . . After her week with the autos, Frances Langford is off to the Coast to make the first of six Westerns with her husband, Jon Hall.

GENE AUTRY'S Western Variety revue goes on this afternoon at 4 and tonight at 8:30 at Uline's . . . With the champ and his hosses will be his Melody Ranch Hands, the Cass County Boys, the Pinafores and Johnny Bondy, Pat Buttram, Carl Cotner, Frankie Marvin and Rufe Davis.

"STROM-boli," a flop here and in half the Nation's theaters, got enough in its first week to pay for itself . . . It cost $850,000 to make, with publicity and distribution expenses upping costs to over a million . . . In 320 theaters last week, it drew $1,248,000 . . . "From here on," says RKO, "it's all gravy."

JACK BENNY will emcee the White House photographers' party for President Truman Saturday night . . . On the swell bill will be Dorothy Lamour, Pianist Liberace (a real Truman favorite), Singer Jo Stafford, that wondrously attractive dance team, Marge and Gower Champion (vets of the Capital stage!), and Wally Cox, who was such a hit in the short-lived "Dance Me a Song" . . . All will be feted by Eric Johnston and the MPA this afternoon at 5:30.

THE Unnatural National's "Her Wonderful Lie" is a dull, stupid and poorly recorded "adaptation" of Puccini's "La Boheme."

Too bad this, for the Italians' version of "Rigoletto" at the Dupont might have led you to feel the movie approach to opera had begun to make headway. The Marta Eggerth-Jan Kiepura mess on E st. sets movie opera back two decades.

Though the story is ascribed to Henry Murger's "Vie de Boheme," what's been dreamed up is absurd. The artists' studio now has a tenor who wants to sing Rudolfo and, thanks to an ailing, beautiful model, he gets his chance. She ditches him because she's going to die and doesn't want to make him unhappy. She marries wealth. Then she relents and gets herself the job of singing Mimi opposite him during a performance. At the fall of the opera's curtain, the heroine dies. Just as did Mimi. Cute? I don't think so.

One might have thought more of the Puccini score would have been used. Only a few of the arias and one duet are heard. These, to put it mildly, have been poorly recorded, though the chorus and orchestra of the Home Opera House are programmed as the artists.

In short, "Her Wonderful Lie" is not Puccini's Boheme, and as a movie it's terrible. R.L.C.

Postlude

Argentine Pianist Displays Deftness and Tonal Feeling

By Paul Hume

The Pan American Union's Hall of the Americas was crowded last night to hear Raul Spivak, Argentine pianist.

The program opened in conventional fashion with a sonata of Scarlatti and the A Major sonata by Mozart. Between these two stood one of those astonishing program pieces by Rameau, entitled The Cyclops. Music by Chopin and Liszt concluded the first half of the program.

Spivak has good technical resource. He does not pound the piano, and has a poetic feeling for its tonal possibilities. The characteristic stopping and starting in Scarlatti were handled deftly; the Rameau had similar authority.

Using the pedal as lightly as he generally does, Spivak maintains clarity in the older music but at occasional expense to the proper shape and contour of a phrase. This becomes more true, and more important as one moves into romantic and contemporary music.

Thus Mozart's sonata, partly through inadequate pedaling, but primarily through a lack of understanding of style, failed to achieve its proper effect. Its tempos must not vary too much in the first movement. The theme must be distinguishable most of the time, and ornamental figures should be assigned lesser place. In Mozart one of the prime considerations is that of proportion. Spivak has not yet found his ultimate version of this music.

In Chopin and Liszt he was more successful, though here again he should bear in mind the admonition of Anton Rubinstein, "The pedal is the soul of the piano." The pedal is for color, for continuity, for accent; these things must be determined ahead of performance time.

The concert was to conclude with modern works of Ginastera, Morillo, Gianneo, Ravel, Debussy and Scriabin.

Boxer Is Charged In Knife Murder

Just Like Jack

He's Nimble, Quick, Flees Policemen

A would-be burglar who "climbed like a squirrel, ran like a rabbit, jumped like a frog," escaped police early yesterday.

Pvts. A. P. Falter and W. C. Garrett, in a 13th precinct scout car, answered a call to the Quality Drug Store, 2003 18th st. nw. They saw a man attacking the rear door with a pickaxe. At the same time, he saw them.

The policemen said he scurried up a drain pipe to the roof of the two-story building. They followed. The fugitive ran across several roofs, jumping from one to another, and drawing ahead of the officers. Then he circled back to the drug store roof, toward the front.

Next, the policemen said, he slid down a sloping portion of the roof, bounced off a neon sign, damaging it, and dropped 20 feet to the street. By the time the policemen reached the edge of the roof slope, he was too far away for them to use their guns.

The officers balked at the burglar's route to the street. They came down a fire escape.

Willie Lee James, 36, of no fixed address, was arrested yesterday and charged with the knife murder Wednesday evening of Floyd L. Turner in front of 1125 7th st. nw.

Police said that James was formerly a professional fighter here under the name of "King Kong." He was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner C. S. Lawrence on the murder charge and held without bail and the case was continued to March 8.

Mr. Turner, 37, of Kensington, Md., and Stanley, Va., was found slumped on the sidewalk, his throat slashed and bleeding. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Late Wednesday night, Ellis Turner, 41, the victim's brother, of Stanley, Va., and George L. Good, 37, of Luray, Va., went to the Second Precinct station. They told police they had been with Floyd Turner just befor he was cut. Ellis Turner said a huge man had knocked him down, and had cut Floyd Turner. Good told polcie he thought Ellis Turner had cut his brother.

Yesterday, police investigating the case, found a witness who said a Negro known as "Fats" who eats in a restaurant near the scene, had slashed the victim.

When James arrived at the restaurant yesterday afternoon, he was arrested and, according to police, admitted the cutting.

He told police that the Turner brothers approached him on the sidewalk outside a doughnut shop. He said Floyd Turner demanded a dime of him to buy doughnuts and he replied that "you're drunk now." Both men crowded him, he said, and he struck Ellis Turner, drew the knife to "bluff" the men, but used it when they "kept crowding me."

Ellis Turner and Good told police the three had come here Sunday night, had stayed various places since, and had worked part-time as tree-trimmers. They said the three had done some drinking Wednesday, gone to a movie, and then decided to buy doughnuts at the 7th st. shop. Good said he was inside when the altercation took place, and the Turner brothers were outside.

The dead man has two children who live in Kensington, and police said they believe he lived there part of the time, and part at Stanley, Va., of which he was a native.

An inquest in the case will take place at 11:30 a.m., today at the District Morgue.

Lane Paroles Three From Prince Georges

Three men convicted in Prince Georges County were among a dozen paroled yesterday from Maryland penal institutions by Gov. William Preston Lane.

One was Norman R. Strait, 39, formerly of Riverdale, Md., arrested in March, 1948, and convicted the following month of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge on an 11-year-old girl. He served nearly two years of a five-year sentence.

The second was Arthur O. Newman, 26, who served about a year and three months of a three-year sentence for auto theft and housebreaking. He formerly lived in Seat Pleasant.

The third was Edgar W. Olsen, originally of Houston, Tex., who was a Fort Belvoir soldier at the time of his arrest on December 15, 1946. He and another Fort Belvoir soldier received nine-year sentences in January, 1947, for slugging and robbing a Baltimore salesman who had picked them up as hitchhikers. They tossed him into a ditch at the time and took his car. Olsen was arrested a few moments later for speeding with the car, and the other soldier was arrested the next day.

Professor to Give Dentistry Lecture

The fourth in a series of guest lectures at the Naval Medical School, Bethesda, Md., will be presented at 8:15 p. m. today.

Marine Waives Extradition in Slaying Case

Ash Fork, Ariz., Feb. 23 (AP).—Marine Sergt. Carson James, wanted in Pontiac, Mich., for the "family secret" murder of his father in 1947, agreed today to waive extradition to Michigan.

James, 27, was arrested here yesterday. The body of his father, Stanley James, was discovered Tuesday in a crude grave beneath a cow shed on the family's small truck farm at Clawson, Mich., near Pontiac.

The tip that led police to the body came from Mrs. Muriel Hockersmith of 1847 Mintwood pl. nw., Washington, D. C., the sergeant's sister.

Mrs. Hockersmith, a teacher at a Cabin John, Md., school, told of the slaying to ease her conscience, police said. The murder had been kept a family secret for two years.

[The United Press quoted young James in Ash Fork as saying: "It will all come out in the wash."]

Quebec Opens Time-Bomb Slaying Trial

Quebec City, Que., Feb. 23 (U.P.). Dressed in mourning, J. Albert Guay went on trial in a heavily guarded courthouse today on a charge of murdering his wife by time-bombing an airliner.

The slim, dapper jewelry salesman, clad in a comber black suit, looked calm and composed as he was escorted into the courtroom by two police officers. He stood erect and in a clear voice pleaded not guilty to the charge that could cost him his life.

Ten jurors, all men, were picked at the opening session.

Guay, 32, is charged with killing his raven-haired wife Rita, 29, by planting a camouflaged time-bomb aboard a Canadian Pacific DC-3 on September 9. The bomb exploded, and the crippled plane hurtled onto a jagged mountainside, killing all 23 persons aboard. Three of the victims were officials of the Kennecot Copper Corp.

As the trial opened, the defense made an unsuccessful request for adjourned on grounds an essential witness, a steamship captain, was at sea and could not appear before May 15.

Rucker Won't Seek Pinball Ban—Yet

Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker said yesterday he has changed his mind about presenting to the County Board this Saturday a proposed local ordinance outlawing pinball machines as public nuisances.

Reason for his changed plans, Rucker said, is Senate Bill 251, reported out of the Virginia Senate's General Laws Committee on Wednesday. The bill would specifically legalize pinball machines, without payoffs, throughout Virginia.

Rucker repeated his contention yesterday that "under the present law" the devices are illegal.

He labeled them "a major factor in juvenile delinquency" and said he was "very much disturbed" by the General Laws Committee's favorable action on the bill.

Rucker threatened several weeks ago to seize an estimated dozen pinball machines, recently installed in Arlington, under a State law which forbids devices readily adaptable to gambling.

ECA Names Straus, Former Macy Aide, To High Paris Post

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday announced the appointment of Ralph I. Straus, New York department store executive, to a high-ranking Marshall Plan post in Paris.

Straus, formerly an official of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., will serve as a special assistant to Marshall Plan Ambassador W. Averell Harriman.

Straus will head up an expanded European trade promotion program designed to help Marshall Plan countries boost exports to the United States.

D. C. Insurance Sales Off 2% In January

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington sales of ordinary life insurance in January totaled $9,035,000, a dip of 2 percent under the $9,959,000 in the same 1949 month.

The local decline last month was in contrast with a 9 percent increase in both Virginia and Maryland. The national average held unchanged in January, compared with the like 1949 period.

It was recalled in local insurance circles that the first month of 1949 also got off to a slow start, but sales came back strongly to show a gain for the year of nearly six million dollars.

Local insurance sales by months compared in 1949 with 1948 as follows:

January	$9,939,000	$11,538,000
February	10,068,000	9,545,000
March	12,997,000	10,506,000
April	11,867,000	11,579,000
May	11,688,000	10,870,000
June	11,259,000	11,412,000
July	10,957,000	10,504,000
August	11,429,000	9,283,000
September	9,338,000	9,913,000
October	10,983,000	11,057,000
November	11,613,000	11,400,000
December	12,525,000	11,272,000
Total	$134,663,000	$128,899,000

The figures were reported yesterday by the Life Insurance Agency Management Association of Hartford.

TRANSIT DIVIDEND: Directors of Capital Transit Co. yesterday declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock, payable April 1 to stock of record March 13. This was the same rate as in the previous four quarters. The announcement stated that the current dividend was being made "out of undistributed earnings of prior years." Capital Transit stock yesterday reached a new high of $32 a share on the Washington Stock Exchange.

ODD LOTS: Manufacturers Credit Co., Washington, declared regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share, payable March 31 to stock of record March 18 . . . The Washington general insurance agency of A. H. Baker & Co., Inc., has moved to larger quarters in the Woodward Building . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index dipped this week to $5.83, against $5.86 in preceding week . . . This week's auto output is estimated at 94,637 cars and 22,894 trucks, compared with 92,791 cars and 23,306 trucks in preceding week . . . A carpet made of synthetic fibers will be marketed this year by one leading maker, because of the rising price of carpet wool.

HONOR: Leading producers and managers of the Peoples Life Insurance Co. were honored last night at a dinner in the Statler. Speakers were S. W. Hauser, president, and William T. Leith, vice president. The three-day convention will conclude Friday night with a banquet at which the speaker will be Kenneth L. Anderson, senior consultant of the Life Insurance Agency Management Association of Hartford.

LOCAL DIVIDENDS: Potomac Electric Power Co. declared the regular quarterly dividend of 22½ cents a share on common and the usual dividends on the two classes of preferred stock. The common dividend is payable March 31 to stock of record March 6; preferred dividends to same record date, but payable April 1 . . . Mergenthaler Linotype Co. voted a quarterly dividend of 75 cents a common share, payable March 24 to stock of record March 10.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Col. Daniel I. Moler, "Agent of the Year" of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., was honored with a dinner at the Columbia Country Club by members of J. D. Marsh and Associates . . . Gerald D. Grosner of Washington was reelected treasurer of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers . . . Robert P. March has been appointed advertising manager of Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp. . . . John G. Courtright of Washington has qualified for membership in the President's Club of Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. . . . Stanley D. Osborne, formerly of Eastern Air Lines, has been appointed vice president and treasurer of Mathieson Chemical Corp.

ELECTION: H. Randolph Maddox was reelected president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. at a directors meeting yesterday. Other reelected officers are: Robert C. McCann, John A. Remon, William J. McManus and Arthur B. Goetze, vice presidents; Robert W. Michie, vice president and comptroller; John T. Quisenberry, general counsel; Robert W. Russell, secretary and treasurer; Clarence H. Johnson, vice president and general manager, and T. Stanley Vanneman, auditor.

EARNINGS: Motorola, Inc., and subsidiaries reported net income of $5,280,196 or $6.60 a share for 1949. Comparable figures for 1948 are unavailable, as previously only the parent company issued a report. Other earnings statements:

Interfaith Visits Slated Over Weekend

Fifty Christian and Jewish young people this weekend will visit churches and synagogues to learn about each other's religious and cultural traditions.

The three-day interfaith seminar is sponsored jointly by the Washington Federation of Christian Youth and the inter-religious department of the Anti-Defamation League.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Rabbi Hyman Ezra Cohen, president of the Washington Board of Rabbis, will serve as advisors to the group.

The program will begin tonight with a visit to Sabbath services of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, 822 H st. nw.

On Saturday they will visit Adas Israel Congregation, 6th and I sts. nw., where Rabbi Solomon H. Metz will read sections of the Torah which describe the basic concepts of brotherhood.

Lunch will be served at Inspiration House, interracial community center at 1867 Kalorama rd. nw. The Rev. Dr. Stephen Gill Spottswood, president of the District Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will speak on "Interracial Progress in Washington."

Afterward, there will be a seminar discussion on "Prejudice," led by Alex Weinstein, community relations director of the Anti-Defamation League. Saturday evening there will be a program for the group at B'nai B'rith Hillel House, George Washington University.

On Sunday the young people will attend services at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H sts. nw., and the Washington Cathedral, Wisconsin and Massachusetts aves. nw.

The seminar will conclude with a luncheon meeting at Mary Graydon Hall, American University, at which Dr. Reissig and Rabbi Cohen will speak.

Sylvan Schwartz Opens Law Office At Barr Building

Sylvan S. Schwartz yesterday entered private law practice here with offices in the Barr Building.

Schwartz, a former Assistant United States Attorney, recently resigned his position with the Bureau of Internal Revenue. He will specialize in tax work.

While with the Government he handled numerous tax matters, including examination of false returns of liquor dealers who as a result paid the Treasury more than $500,000 in taxes during the war.

Close Vote Seen on Travel Bias Bill

Richmond, Va., Feb. 23.—Seventeen lawyer members of the House of Delegates prepared today to vote at 10:30 a. m. Thursday on perhaps the "hottest" question before the 1950 session of the General Assembly.

As the House committee on courts of justice, they will decide whether or not the legislature will be required to stand up and be counted on a bill to abolish racial segregation on public transportation in Virginia.

It was generally admitted by committee members today that within the week "terrific pressure" has mounted from both sides. Testimony before a public hearing was overwhelmingly in favor of the bill, proposed by Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria.

Three members of the courts of justice committee are co-patrons with Boothe on the measure. It's proponents feel assured of at least six votes for reporting it to the floor of the House.

Observers say there are at least four members of the committee unalterably opposed to the bill, which would not restrict localities in enforcement of hegregation ordinances.

Where the remaining seven members of the committee stand was anyone's guess today. It is expected there will be a full committee present when the vote is taken.

Governor Battle maintained a "hands off" attitude at his press conference today. He declined comment by saying he didn't think it was "an administrative matter."

Arnold to Speak at Brotherhood Service

Thurman W. Arnold, former assistant attorney general, will address the annual Brotherhood Sabbath Service of the Washington Hebrew Congregation today.

The service, open to the public, will be at 8 p. m. at the Temple at 822 Eighth st. nw. It is held in connection with "Brotherhood Week," sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Brotherhood Week programs will be held today at Mount Vernon School in Alexandria and at Jefferson Junior High School.

A play "The Story of Jimmy" will be given at 2:15 p. m. at the Jefferson school. The school is the first in the community to have a Brotherhood Club, with children of all major religious beliefs as members.

Rabbi Ira Sud will speak on "The Place of God in the Modern Community" at a Brotherhood Week service at the Arlington Jewish Center, 2920 Lee blvd., Arlington, at 8:30 p. m. today.

Housework Easy Without Nagging Backache
As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.
If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Film Lawyer Appeals for Self-Reliance

With a plea for a self-reliant society where opportunity and incentive can abolish poverty, Otto E. Koegel, New York attorney, addressed a Founders' Day convocation at American University yesterday.

Koegel is chief counsel for Twentieth-Century Fox Film Corp., member of a prominent New York law firm, and a trustee of the university.

In his address, Koegel said most Americans believe in a society in which the individual experiences the maximum of self-reliance, and where each individual having physical or economic handicaps is assisted in overcoming them so he may become self-reliant.

After the convocation, Koegel was guest of honor at a lawyers' luncheon given by the faculty of Washington College of Law of American University.

Other Founders' Day events scheduled are a concert by the National Symphony at Clendenin Auditorium on the campus tonight; and a luncheon Saturday given by Dr. Robert V. Fletcher, chairman of the board of trustees, and Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president, for 24 faculty members who have published books during the past year.

Liquor Price-Fixing Held Void in New York

Albany, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—The Court of Appeals ruled unanimously today that New York State's mandatory retail liquor price-fixing law is unconstitutional.

The law forbids retailers to sell liquor below prices set by the distiller or brand owner under penalty of suspension or loss of license.

Excerpts from 1949 Annual Report

Financial Results

Our consolidated net profit for 1949, after all expenses and taxes, was $10,122,106, a new high record for the fifth successive year, comparing with $9,087,574 in 1948 and $7,282,506 in 1947.

The regular dividends of $4.25 a share, totaling $391,018 were paid on the preferred stock, while the common stockholders received $5 a share, or $5,152,320, the same as in 1948. The excess of earnings over dividends, amounting to $4,578,768, was retained for use in the business.

Our current assets at the close of the year were $24,484,838 and current liabilities were $8,774,223, so that working capital was $15,710,615, compared with $15,627,448 the year before.

At the year-end the indicated market value of the quoted securities which we own was $120,685,080, compared with $111,681,044 at the end of 1948. Their book values on our balance sheet were $56,709,838 at the close of 1949, comparing with $51,240,483 the previous year.

Tonnages Handled

Our tonnages handled were as follows:	1949	1948
Iron Ore	11,673,000	11,828,000
Lake Coal	6,857,000	11,234,000
Anthracite Coal	2,063,000	2,691,000

While the total movement of iron ore down the lakes by all companies was 16% below the 1948 peace time record, the Hanna-operated fleet of bulk carriers ended the season with a total movement of ore only 4% below its 1948 record.

Labrador-Quebec Iron Ore

An important step taken during 1949 was the formation of Iron Ore Company of Canada (a Delaware corporation) for the purpose of further financing the development of the ore deposits in the Labrador-Quebec concessions. In this new company, five outstanding steel companies — Armco Steel Corporation, National Steel Corporation, Republic Steel Corporation, Wheeling Steel Corporation, and The Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company—joined with Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines, Ltd., Hanna Coal & Ore Corporation and the two existing concession companies in order to prepare for commercial production. Another new company, Hollinger-Hanna Ltd., equally owned by Hollinger and Hanna, was formed to supervise management of the operations.

Iron Ore Company of Canada has been given the right to lease, under certain conditions, a large part of the iron ore reserves in both of the concessions, with the underlying Canadian concession companies retaining ample reserves for the Canadian steel industry and for exportation to England and Europe. If the program proceeds as now contemplated, Iron Ore Company of Canada will undertake to construct a railroad from the ore bodies to the port of Seven Islands on the St. Lawrence River, with the necessary terminal docks and other facilities.

The undertaking is one of the large developments in mining history. A great deal of exploratory, development, and engineering work is still to be done and it will be at least another year or two before construction can begin.

The drilling program, which has been in progress for three years, has proved with reasonable accuracy the existence of over 350,000,000 tons of high-grade, direct-shipping open pit iron ore and manganiferous iron ore. Up to now the drilling has been confined to ore bodies which outcrop at surface. As the unexposed ore bodies are explored, additions to the proven tonnages will of course progress at a slower rate. Preliminary surveys have been completed over the entire length of the railroad route from the ore bodies to Seven Islands. Final locations have been determined for two thirds of its distance, including the most difficult sections. Final locations will be determined for the balance during the coming season.

The year's developments have emphasized more strongly than ever the urgent importance, both from an economic and from a security viewpoint, of completing the St. Lawrence Seaway to connect these extensive, high-grade ore deposits with the steel producers of the Great Lakes areas, both in the United States and Canada.

If these great industries, as their supplies from Lake Superior decline, can turn to this low cost supplementary source opened by the Waterway, they can extend for many years the widespread employment and the value of the millions of dollars invested in plants, docks and facilities in their present locations which are now contributing so greatly to both regional and national prosperity. The advantages to both Canada and the United States would be even more compelling in the unfortunate event of another war, when a quickly expandable supply of direct-shipping open pit iron ore, moving over a protected interior waterway, might well prove to be a decisive factor.

G. M. HUMPHREY,
President

Cleveland, Ohio, February 15, 1950.

Contraceptive Machine Bill Draws Debate

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Feb. 23.—Banning the sale of contraceptives in vending machines would reduce extra-marital relations among adolescents, the Senate Judicial Proceedings Committee was told here today.

Carroll F. Palmer, 1611 Oakview dr., Silver Spring, urged the Senators to report favorably on HB 45, which would accomplish this purpose, as an aid in the reduction of juvenile delinquency.

But Allen P. Gough of Aberdeen who has been in the contraceptive vending machine business for two years, warned that the bill's passage would drive him into bankruptcy—and I'm not the only one.

"Only 1 Percent Sold to Youths"

Gough contended that only 1 percent of the contraceptives sold in the State are available to adolescents. He said those sold in vending machines in tavern rest rooms are not available to the State's youth.

However, on rebuttal, Palmer declared that any youth may go into a tavern up to 10 p. m. in the company of his parents, and that there is nothing to prevent his using the tavern's rest room.

Delegate George G. McLeish (D., Prince Georges), sponsor of the bill, on defending it before the committee said:

"We can't prohibit sex relations, but we can regulate those things that incite promiscuity. If you can't be sold on the idea that mothers and fathers should be helped in bringing up their children, then I can't sell you on this bill," he said.

Taken Under Advisement

Mrs. Joseph S. Yuill, chairman of the home and family life committee of the Prince Georges County Council of Parent-Teachers Associations, told the legislators, "either we have to admit that man is basically animal and promiscuous, and to keep down the illegitimate population provide contraceptives in every public rest room, or we have to decide that man is above that."

Committee members took the bill under advisement. At the same time, they accepted for committee consideration an amendment which would exempt taverns from the bill.

President to Head Off National Rail Strike

President Truman disclosed yesterday he will invoke an automatic 60-day stop to head off a threatened nationwide railroad strike, tentatively set to begin at 6 a. m. (EST) Monday.

The Brotherhood of Conductors and Trainmen, representing between 200,000 and 250,000 workers, called the strike. The Railway Labor Act provides that a strike must be postponed for at least 60 days after the President appoints an emergency fact-finding board.

The White House announced that Mr. Truman will appoint an emergency board today or Saturday.

SALE OF VALUABLE FREDERICK COUNTY REAL ESTATE. The Mayor and Aldermen of Frederick will receive sealed bids until 5:00 P. M., MARCH 3, 1950, for the purchase of property at the Frederick Municipal Airport, aggregating approximately 429.11 acres of land, more or less. This property will be offered in four separate parcels, in joint offerings and as a whole tract. This property lies adjacent to the Frederick Municipal Airport and about three-quarters of a mile from the Frederick city limits. There are three sets of farm buildings on the property and much of the land abutts on the Monocacy River near historic Jug Bridge. This real estate, all of which is under cultivation, is some of the most fertile land in Frederick County. Its proximity to Frederick likewise makes it available for the future commercial or residential expansion of the city. For complete description of the property to be sold and specification sheets setting out details, contact W. R. Walter, City Engineer, City Hall, Frederick, Maryland (telephone 2723) or Richard E. Zimmerman, City Attorney, Cramer Building, Frederick, Maryland (telephone 458) or for a showing of the property contact Delbert Null (telephone 1141 or Grayson H. Mercer & Sons (telephone 537). THE MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF FREDERICK. RICHARD E. ZIMMERMAN, City Attorney.

VIEWPOINT

By Dave Gerard

"It took everything I had—and everything I could borrow. But I told Milly why not buy the house—we'll probably live here the rest of our lives!"

"Oh, by the way, send Ewoldt in here a minute! I'm moving him to our Timbuctoo office. He'll have to leave tomorrow!"

Mrs. J. S. Sells Ping Pong Table in One Day With a Post Ad

When Mrs. J. S. of Forest Hill Rd. advertised a ping pong table for sale, she never suspected that so many Post readers were looking for just such an item. By 8:30 Sunday morning, the day the ad appeared, she had made the sale and then she had to disappoint many who called later in the day. "The phone rang steadily all day long," reported Mrs. S.

'Mr. Jones, Meet the Master'

Mankind Now Must Make Moral Progress for World's Sake

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

By Dr. Peter Marshall

RESEARCH UNLIMITED

During the lifetime of most of us, science and invention has made its greatest strides.
Everybody over 40 can remember the mood of optimism that marked the first decade of the twentieth century.
People then were living in the days of the first telephones perfected for general use.
the first express trains
the first uses of electricity the first internal combustion engine.
Great things were in prospect.

The airplane no longer amazes, but whisks us across the continent from breakfast to supper.
Motion pictures have become a weekly diet.
Electric eyes open doors at our approach, and radar enables us to see in the dark.
Penicillin and sulfa drugs have conquered many a germ, and atomic energy has opened a vast new world.
All of this since most of us were born . . .
These latest inventions and discoveries have made war more terrible, and while they have given us many conveniences and comforts, they have made life more complicated peace more difficult and the human heart more troubled.
Undoubtedly we have improved means—but unfortunately, we have not improved ends.
We have better ways of getting there,
but we have no better places to go.
We can save more time, but we are not making any better use of the time we save.
Everyone agrees that we have made far more advances in the scientific world than we have made in the world of morals and ethics.
Spiritually, we have not kept pace with our progress in the realm of science and invention.
If great advances have been made in the realm of the spirit, then either they have not been reported or publicized, or we have chosen to ignore them . . .
else we are forced to the conclusion that they have not been made at all.
Why is it that we have so little interest in spiritual discoveries—new discoveries of God of God's working in His world of God's dealing with His people?
The scientists have forged far ahead.
What they have invented and provided for us has outstripped our moral character our spiritual quality and our religious faith.
Scientific discovery has gone far ahead of man's progress in the moral realm.
That is the trouble.
Some people have thought that the more science we have, the more religion can be discarded.
But that is not so.
Rather, the fact is that the more science we have, the more we need character-building religion.
We are now at the place where we see that progress simply must be made in the realm of morals and ethics and character, if civilization is to be saved.
The time has come when we must face the solving of the world's true problems—the human problems.
The problem of lying—which is called propaganda . . .
the problem of selfishness—which is called nationalism or self-interest . . .
the problem of greed—which is often called profit or good business . . .
the problem of license disguised as liberty . . .
the problem of lust masquerading as love . . .
the challenge of materialism—the hook that is baited with security . . .
These are the problems that confront us now.
Science has its foundation in research.
Its discoveries all rest upon the patience willingness and open-minded seeking of thousands of men and women who have taken one single proposition and sat down humbly before it to explore and to test it, a great number of times under varying conditions and then to report the results.
Suppose that in this way, there were a comparable number of young men and women setting out to get their Master's degree, or to write their Ph. D. thesis on their findings, after months of careful experiment with such propositions as these:
"Therefore take no thought, saying What shall we eat? or What shall we drink? or Wherewithal shall we be clothed? . . . for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matthew 6:31-33)
Or this one . . .
"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." (Matthew 7:7)
This sort of research could advance much faster than physical science, which requires special laboratories perfect conditions and expensive equipment.
For it's the sort of research that anyone can pursue.
You say you have no time?
Anyone of us could delve into it where we are as we are in our prsent jobs, and it would make our jobs new and exciting, humdrum no longer.
No time?
A tired-out rail splitter, crouched over his tattered books by candlelight at the day's end, preparing for his future, instead of snoring or sky-larking like his colaborers—
Lincoln cut out his path to later immortality in his spare time.
An underpaid and overworked telegraph clerk stole hours from sleep, or from play, at night, trying to crystallize into realities certain fantastic dreams in which he had faith.
Today, the whole world is benfiting by what Edison did—in his spare time.
You, too, have spare time.
Why not use it in this kind of research which pays wonderful dividends in this life and the next?
Suppose, for example, that a group of Christians decided to experiment with the Lord's exhortation to tithe for one year.
What do you suppose the results would be?
The tithe is the form of giving advocated in the Bible.
All through the Old Testament, the principle of dedicating the tenth to God is taught and observed.
So much was it a part of the habits and customs of men of that day that in New Testament times it was taken for granted—something that simply was expected of men of integrity.
Jesus expected it of men of God.
He felt it was only when a man began to give above his tenth that he was showing real generosity.
What if we were challenged to try it out for a year?

If you are a skeptic, would it not be worth your while to investigate in those cases where doctors can do nothing?
For you see, there are still miracles being performed.
I have seen them happen.
Still, in these latter days, there are clear evidences of God's power working in human affairs.
That we must admit.
God has not withdrawn any power that was available in the days of the first disciples.
There is certainly no indication in the Bible that the power given to them was for a certain period only, or to work in a certain location.
It was not like a free trial offer advertised "good only for thirty days."
If the other elements in the Gospel message were to have universal application, and to hold true until Christ returned,
why not this element of healing, that has always had such a strong appeal to human hearts and is so wistfully remembered by those in trouble?
Everywhere He went, Christ was confronted with sickness and disease, and everywhere He did something about it.
Yet, there were times when He could do no mighty works, as Mark puts it, because of unbelief.
Where there was no faith, He was powerless.
And there were many cases of sickness where no healing was sought.
"But," someone will say, "that was all very well for Christ to do these things, for after all, He was the Son of God.
He had powers unique as He Himself was unique."
True—but He promised the same powers to His disciples.
Christ said:
"Verily, verily, I say unto you,
he that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto My Father."
Now for some reason or other, we are inclined to skip over that promise, or to spiritualize it
as though by the passing of the centuries the words have lost the meaning they apparently had to the first disciples.
The truth is that the Church has permitted this breath-taking part of the Gospel to fall out of it.
Is the "good news" only for the soul?
Is it simply for the life to come, with no application to the life that now is?
The answer lies in a lack of researchers.
Men have been willing to let mosquitos bite them in the interests of science and human welfare.
How many are willing to give themselves away to take risks in spiritual research?
No one yet has ever set out to test God's promises fairly, thoroughly, and humbly, and had to report that God's promises don't work.
On the contrary, given a fair opportunity, God always surprises and overwhelms those who truly seek, with His bounty and His power.

We have neglected spiritual food.
Without spiritual exercise, our souls are soft and flabby.
The temptation is powerful to become so obsessed with the urgent, brutal facts of the immediate world that faith in Christ and His way of living becomes like a lovely impractical dream a pious hope
a frail illusion.
The challenge today, pointed and heated by the atomic bomb, is still what it always was—a challenge to spiritual research.

Applying for a Job

When you apply in person for . . . A steady occupation . . . You should pursue your purpose with . . . At least some preparation . . . You should be ready to present . . . The things you want to mention . . . But your apparel should not be . . . The kind to draw attention . . . You should not be too humble nor . . . Display too much aggression . . . But you should tell the truth and try . . . To make a good impression . . . . The rest depends upon your past . . . And how you have been rated . . . Which quietly and thoroughly . . . Will be investigated . . . And if the interview results . . . In permanent employment . . . The chances are your work and pay . . . Will bring you much enjoyment.

More Than One Way to Cook A Fish; Try a Few in Lent

By Lucia Brown

LIKE the lady in the rhyme about "Fishy, fishy in the brook," many homemakers feel the best way to cook seafood is to fry it.

They roll it in cracker crumbs, put it in a pan, and sizzle it in fat, fast as they can!

Of course, fish is delicious cooked this way (though you might make that sizzling "slow" for tenderness sake.) If yours is a family which will eat lots of fish this Lent, however, they may get pretty tired of the fried routine before it's over.

Lent is a time without equal for adventure in fish cookery. The 40 days and 40 nights which began this week give you an unexcelled chance to discover new ways of serving, as well as new varieties of the denizens of the deep.

There are dozens of fascinating ways to cook shrimp, for instance. Besides, there are new kinds of shrimp. Maybe you've noticed the recent stories in the papers about shrimp fishing grounds discovered in the Gulf of Mexico.

From these grounds as well as from others, we're now getting shrimp in Technicolor—coral, brown, or grayish green. Charles E. Jackson, general manager of the National Fisheries Institute, says they're confusing a lot of people. He explains that they needn't, however, for they all turn pink once they're cooked and the texture and flavor is exactly the same. Reason for the difference in the color of the raw shrimp is that they take on the color of the coral reefs, sand, or rocks on which they rest.

You can use any of them in the following recipe for Shrimp Newburg with Almonds. (A netful of other seafood recipes follows, too.)

SHRIMP NEWBURG WITH ALMONDS

1 cup cooked shrimp
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2½ tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon Worcestershire
Dash cayenne pepper
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 egg yolk
Toast on patty shells

Sliver almonds lengthwise. Clean and rinse shrimp. Melt butter and blend in flour. Add milk and cook and stir until thickened. Blend in salt, Worcestershire sauce, cayenne, lemon juice, and shrimp. Stir in beaten egg yolk slowly. Add almonds and serve at once on hot toast or in patty shells. This recipe serves four.

Truck Driver, 31, Unbends to Ask Advice; He Wants to Marry Girl He Loves, But His Gang, As Is Their Custom, Warns Against It

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I used to think people were silly to write letters to you, asking advice; but now that I have a problem myself I can see why. I have read your column for some time, and I think maybe you can tell me what to do.

I am a truck driver here in town. I am 31 years old. I run around with some other fellows who work with me. It seems that we are pretty thick; that is, we are good friends. Now I have met a girl whom I want to marry. I am in love with her but all the fellows say that they have heard disreputable things about her, and that they will be "plenty burned up"—that is, disgusted with me—if I marry her.

I have been going with girls before and always the fellows found something wrong with each girl, so in order not to break up the gang I would always quit the girl. But it looks like the fellows are opposed to marriage on general principles—afraid it might break up the "lodge," I guess. I want to marry the girl, but I don't want to get everyone down on me.

I can't seem to make the fellows see that I don't care what people are saying about Ruth. I don't believe them anyway, for she isn't that kind of a girl. How can I make them understand my feelings? Perhaps your comments would clear the air. Or maybe I shouldn't marry the girl anyway. We've always had fun together, us fellows. Maybe I would be happier if I listened to them. Please advise. J. F.

A Manifestation of Stunted Growth

DEAR J. F.: It seems to me that this gang of fellows, which includes you, poses a problem of arrested development—and that the chances of any one of you being a fit husband for any girl are rather slim.

When men your age are ganging together in bachelorhood, with a hostile cynical attitude towards the opposite sex, you are acting on a level with 11-year-olds. Between the ages of about 10 to 13 years, boys who have average opportunities to make friends tend to form into gangs or groups or clubs, and they manifest an honestly self sufficient "rejection" of girls' society in this period. They tend to regard girls scornfully as pests or crybabies or bossies—or even tattletales.

In that phase the boys are still growing psychologically, as you and your cronies are not. In ganging together for companionship and adventure, the downy-cheeked lads are breaking out, like chicks from a shell, from their childhood sphere, in which their parents had been the only persons having great emotional significance for them.

At nature's behest they are moving outward from the nest and making new affiliations with their own kind, and since they are as yet physically and psychologically unready for matehood, instinctively they prefer the company of "the fellows" to the society of girls. Likewise most girls this age also prefer the company of their own sex to the company of boys, for a really cozy get-together.

His Buddies Fear They Aren't Men

THE NEXT STEP in normally progressing social and psychological development is for boys and girls to become watchfully and receptively interested in each other, as happens usually in the later teens—the period of "adolescence," so-called. And from here on, it is a wholesome aspect of individual social maturation, for boys and girls to pair off in sentimental companionship, accepting each other as friends, comrades, confidantes, etc., until in the early twenties—as a rule—a partner for marriage is chosen.

Your gang is sticking together for psychologically subnormal reasons, I think. The ring leaders try to browbeat would-be deserters back into camp because they don't want to be left alone, as they fear they will be some day. All of you are "birds of a feather" in one respect—none of you feels himself to be man enough to marry a good girl and take care of her. In short, the essence of your trouble is that you are afraid of women, marriage, the sex relationship on decent terms, and the responsibilities of financing a family's welfare.

Thus your unsolved problem is—How to become a man, instead of a craven yes-vote in a cowardly congregation that is always campaigning against taking part in the business of being maturely human. It seems you are up to your neck in handicapping associates, and if you have found a girl who would be a good companion on the road to normalcy, you'd do well to marry her—provided, however, that you have the guts to completely bow out of the gang and never hearken to its senseless influence again.

Both dresses were borrowed from the Goodwill Industries collection for the show

Yesteryear and Today

Lansburgh's Celebrates 90th Birthday

WITH a fashion panorama entitled "Yesteryear and Today," Lansburgh & Bro. yesterday opened a year-long celebration of the ninetieth anniversary of its founding.

Established in 1860, Lansburgh's is Washington's oldest department store. During this year, executives plan a series of shows and exhibits portraying the past and present history of the Capital. Included will be showings of old and new china, glasswear, home furnishings and fashions which figured in the lives of Washingtonians from the time of the Civil War to the present day.

Yesterday's fashion review opened with four period costumes, depicting women's tastes in clothing in 1860, 1880, 1900 and 1925. Remainder of the show was devoted to modern apparel with 1950 garments ranging from casual sportswear to evening ensembles.

'Charm Sorority' Draws Full House

Teen-agers in quest of that elusive quality known as glamour have joined Bond's Charm Sorority in such numbers that an additional class is being arranged for their convenience.

In addition to the regularly scheduled Friday afternoon classes, second of which will take place at 4 p. m. today, sessions will be held each Monday. Miss Phyllis Bell, director of the Phyllis Bell School of Fashion Modeling, is conducting both sessions at Bond's, 1335 F st. nw.

More than 300 girls from local high schools attended last Friday's opening class and several hundred more were turned away. It is for these that the Monday sessions are being inaugurated. In a 12-week course they will receive instruction in fashion modeling, posture, care of skin, makeup and hair styling, color harmony, voice and diction.

Square Dance Fans Shift the Scene Of Their Do-Si-Dos; Curling Irons These Days Built to Avoid Shock

DEAR ANNE,

What group or organization in the Washington vicinity, besides the Recreation Department, offers square or folk dancing for adults? We are particularly interested in one located in Silver Spring, Md. Mrs. Basil E. Brown, 2480 16th st. nw.

So far as we can learn, there is no regular series of square dances in Silver Spring. However, several schools and churches in or near that community sponsor square dances occasionally. The Grace Methodist Church in Takoma Park is one such sponsor; the Montgomery Blair School is another. For detailed information as to what square dances are available near you on any particular night, you might call Ralph Case, veteran D. C. square dance caller. He can be reached at Twining 2344.

DEAR ANNE,

I have an electric curling iron. Some one told me if I wet my hair when using the curling iron, I would get a shock. Is that correct? I haven't used the iron yet. Mrs. C. S. Hartman, Middletown, Va.

Unless there is some mechanical defect in your electric curling iron, there should be no danger of a shock when you try to curl wet hair. All such irons are made with special insulation to protect the user. If yours is a new iron of reliable manufacture, there seems no reason for you to fear.

DEAR ANNE,

Can you please give the the address of the Save the Children Federation, an organization devoted to clothing and caring for children in the Cumberland Mountain area? I belive there is a branch in this area which accepts donations of clothing Mrs. S. S. Daley

Both the United Community Service of the District of Columbia and the United States Children's Bureau agree that there is no known local address for the organization to which you refer. The Save the Children Federation is listed with them as having headquarters at 1 Madison ave., New York City, N. Y.

However, in the past this federation has, on occasion, conducted drives for donations in the Washington area, setting up temporary headquarters here for the duration of such drives. Doubtless that is how you came by your impression. The Save the Children Federation does mission work with children in various mountain localities, very possibly in the Cumberland region you cite. You can contact the agency at its New York office for information about how to make donations.

SINCE TWO READERS—I. E. and E. X.—wrote to disagree with some points in E. B.'s recent letter on supplies to take to England, we've had a talk with British Information Service on the matter.

Here, for the benefit of L. W. H. and others moving to England, is what they say:

(1) Whether you take along sugar or not depends on the sharpness of your sweet tooth. The ration now is one-half pound per person per week.

(2) The tea is 2½ ounces a week (3 ounces for those over 70, none for youngsters under 5). If you'll want more than that, take it along. Coffee is not rationed.

(3) Meat is the biggest short, so tinned meats will come in handy. Fish is abundant. Poultry and game aren't rationed either.

(4) The egg ration varies from week to week, averaging 2.8 apiece, so you might take dried eggs for cooking. Powdered or condensed milk are a good "take," too, since the ration isn't large.

(5) In entering the United Kingdom, you may bring in up to 50 pounds of food, with no more than 10 pounds of any individual commodity. The food is liable to duty, but this is generally waived as a courtesy.

(6) Woolens are plentiful and less expensive than here. However, if L. W. H. wants to equip herself with clothing before leaving home, it's good advice to tell her to take warm things, including a snug dressing gown. Fuel is still quite a problem.

(7) Nylon hose are scarce, so take some along. The same goes for household linens. Laundry takes 10 days to three weeks, so allow for that.

(8) Good soap is a useful take. Cosmetics are not particularly scarce but may be more expensive than here.

Anne answers questions through her column only. We regret that time does not permit direct mail or telephone replies. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Woman Tells Off 6000 Men Builders—They Love It

By Conrad P. Harness

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—A woman builder told off 6000 men home builders here this week—and they loved it. Personable Mrs. Henny Mollgaard of Milwaukee said there no longer is any excuse to build row upon row of the same design of "minimum" house.

Speaking before the annual convention of the National Association of Home Builders, she said the Nation is in an economic era of "plenty." "There is plenty of money, materials, labor, customers and good financing."

She was head of a panel of women housing experts who impressed male builders with their know-how of building operations. She pointed out that American women don't want their children to grow up in homes that are too small, too poorly designed, colorless and cold.

The answer is not in push-button controlled houses, or homes that boast all automatic devices on the market, she continued. All the women of America want are the little things, such as flower boxes, built-in book niches, porches, closets, good lighting, pleasing colors and individuality, she said.

"They want homes suitable for children, which means light, airy bedrooms, large enough kitchens, perhaps playrooms. We know these can be had, because they cost very little money. They take more time to plan, knowledge of good design, and a willingness to devote more time to business."

To aid the builders in accomplishing these housing ideals, several women experts in the fields of color, lighting and wall coverings gave illustrated lectures. The men must have been impressed. They took copious notes.

A typical talk was that of Miss Florence Myers, Midwest manager of Katzenbach & Warren, Inc., wallpaper manufacturers. She pointed out that modern wallpapers are vastly different from the ones in use 30 years ago.

Science today has developed wall coverings that are water-grease-fade proof, insect repellent, sound-absorbent and insulated—all done without sacrificing beauty of color and design, according to Miss Myers.

She said that during the next few years wallpaper design should follow this simple formula: First, the pattern must cover space, and then by color establish a "mood" suitable to the room in which it is used.

She told the builders that 1950 wall coverings would be divided into five groups: 1. Flowered papers. 2. Foliage papers. 3. Narrative papers. 4. Stripe and line variations. 5. Textures.

These groups can be used singly or combined in new homes, she revealed, although cautioning that extreme care must be exercised in their selection.

"The floral patterns are so varied," she said, "that no generalization can be made about them. Scale and composition of the paper depends upon where it is to be used.

"Foliage papers can be used anywhere, and are suitable in business office or boudoir. I predict increasing usage for this group during the coming year.

"Of all the paper patterns, the most caution should be exercised in choosing narrative papers, those which tell a definite story. They are intended to 'hold attention,' and should be used in rooms where interest is an asset, not a distraction. They are particularly adaptable to halls and small rooms.

"The stripe and line variations are also widely used, primarily because their non-subjective nature does not restrict them to any specific type of living.

"Wallpaper, of course, has imitated all sorts of textures, and these textured patterns are also important today."

Jap Women Here in 1st Lap Of U. S. Universities Tour

By Nicha Soure

A TRIO of Japanese women told a press conference yesterday that they hope to incorporate the best of American methods in the Japanese educational reform movement.

The women, Miss Ai Hoshino, Mrs. Yuriko Moriya and Dr. Takeko Yoshida, are three of 25 Japanese leaders in education who arrived in the United States under the auspices of the Office of Education to observe school procedures in the United States.

The Japanese leaders are on the first lap of their 20-university tour. At each school they will talk to resident deans, educational leaders and faculty members, concentrating their attentions on the phase of higher education in which each university excells.

The Japanese educational reform movement began after the war, the women said. Previously there were women's colleges but co-education was practically unknown. Even in the elementary grades, boys and girls were taught in separate classrooms. Compulsory education stopped at the sixth grade.

Miss Hoshino, a member of the Japanese Educational Reform Council, said the American Education Mission's report to General MacArthur was accepted almost in its entirety by the council. This reform had the backing of the Japanese people, she added.

Higher Education Opened to Women

SOME of the recommendations which were accepted, Miss Hoshino said, were the opening of doors to women in the higher educational institutions; compulsory education through the ninth grade; a new education pattern comparable to the American sequence of elementary school, junior high school, high school and college.

Dr. Yoshida, professor of chemistry in the Ochanomizu University for Women in Tokyo, hopes to be the first dean of women upon her return to Japan. If she is appointed to this position, she will be the first Japanese woman to hold this title.

All three of the women are leaders in the Japanese Association of University Women, an organization which, although organized three years ago, boasts of 3000 members in 24 chapters.

Webbs Hosts At Prospect House Party

Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James E. Webb were hosts at dinner last evening at Prospect House. Their guests included the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Robert Silvercruys; the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Forrest Sherman; the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis, Thomas B. McCabe, chairman, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System; Rear Adm. and Mrs. Oswald S. Colclough, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Bell, Mrs. Walton Butterworth and Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Barrett.

Argentine Pianist Draws a Crowd

PAUL SPIVACK, Argentine pianist, drew society in large numbers to a concert held yesterday evening at the Pan American Union, both the diplomatic corps and residential Washington being well represented. Invitations to the concert were sent out by Dr. Enrique Ferrer Vieyra, alternate representative to the OAS.

Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis gave a dinner at the Sulgrave Club last evening, honoring the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon. Many other dinners were given for the Sulgrave Club dinner danco.

Capt. and Mrs. Anton Mare entertained at a dinner last evening at their home. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Roy Dunne, Capt. William Veeder, USN, and Capt. Russell Smith, USN.

The Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonnet entertained last evening at a dinner at the embassy. A luncheon at the Brazilian Embassy was given by Miss Carolina Nabuco, sister of the Ambassador.

Dinners Slated Before Fund Ball

MRS. Katharine Byron and Mrs. McCain Smith are among those entertaining at dinner this evening before the Mary MacArthur Memorial Fund ball to be held at the United Nations Club. Proceeds of the dance will go to the National foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Miss MacArthur, daughter of Helen Hayes, died last summer from infantile paralysis.

Have you seen our nylons with the navy-blue heels and pencil-line seams? They're by Beautiful Bryans and sheer as spring haze.

Navy is the blue of spring . . . As seen by Newton Elkin

These polished blues fairly sing of spring and are defined in three heel heights for every daytime occasion. Lent's the Time to Vary Your Menu With Lots of New and Tasty Fish Recipes

2 eggs
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
1 can condensed vegetable soup
¼ cup water
Fluffy cooked rice

Break salmon into large flakes and combine with cracker crumbs, beaten eggs, salt, pepper and onion. Shape into very small balls. Brown in melted fat. Mix soup with water. Pour over salmon balls. Simmer until heated through, for about 15 to 20 minutes. Serve in nest of hot fluffy rice. This recipe makes six servings.

BAKED STUFFED HALIBUT STEAKS

2 halibut steaks, about 1 pound each
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Bread stuffing
4 tablespoons butter or other fat, melted
3 slices bacon (optional)

Sprinkle both sides steak with salt and pepper. Place one steak in well-greased baking pan. Place stuffiing on fish and cover with remaining steak. Fasten together with toothpicks or skewers. Brush top with melted fat and lay slices of bacon on top. Bake in modern oven 350 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 to 40 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with fork. Remove carefully to hot platter and take out fasteners. Garnish and serve hot with sauce—(cream of tomato, or lemon butter sauce, for instance.) This recipe serves six.

Bread Stuffing: Cook ½ cup chopped celery and 2 tablespoons chopped onion in 3 tablespoons melted fat for about 10 minutes. Add 2 cups day-old bread crumbs, ½ teaspoon of thyme or sage, ½ teaspoon salt and dash of pepper. Mix thoroughly.

Armed Forces Hostess Association To Celebrate

The Armed Forces Hostess Association will celebrate its first anniversary with a luncheon Friday, March 3, at 12:30 p. m. at the Fort McNair Officers' Club.

The group was organized a year ago as the Army Hostess Association, with Mrs. James E. Moore, wife of the Brigadier General, the president.

The association now includes more than 1300 assistant hostesses covering all branches of the military establishment. Mrs. William H. Arnold, wife of the major general, is the new president.

The main purpose of the hostesses is to help new service families get established in Washington.

Picture a Streamlined Midriff; Then Bend and You'll Get One

By Ida Jean Kain

TO BANISH the fat that binds muscle—as you stretch, picture a streamlined midriff. As you bend, think flexibility and picture a willowy waistline. And as you swing, concentrate on svelte hips. That's the technique for stretching your imagination as you tone muscles.

Turn on the music and tune into rhythmic slimming. It's more fun that way and it gives the spirits a lift.

Stretch right arm forward and half way up, and stretch right leg back . . . p-u-l-l, centering the pull through the entire midsection . . . and think, "stretching is streamling." Then stretch left arm forward and up and left leg back, and pull . . . the while picturing the slimmer midriff, for that puts the stretching emphasis where it's needed. It helps you to feel svelte . . . so svelte that you want to continue stretching. Six times will do nicely for a starter.

Suppleness Makes a Willowy Waist

NOW THE BEND . . . with right arm up and left arm down, b-e-n-d at the waist to the left, letting left hand slide down the thigh line . . . as you bend think, "suppleness makes a willowy waist." It does too. Reverse position of arms and bend in the opposite direction, holding the picture of a slim young waist, as you pull up strongly with all the midsection muscles. Six stretch-bends will do at the beginning. Each day brings more flexibility, and the down-sliding hand edges closer to the knee . . . then below the knee.

Now swing into hip slimming. Hold onto a chair and, knee straight, swing one leg up in front, then swing vigorously backward and up as far as you can . . . thinking, "hips, hips away!" The leg must be raised past a 45-degree angle to bring into action the muscle on the back of the hips—that's where science swings in. As the band plays on, swing awhile, change sides and repeat with the other leg, gaily, the while picturing smooth, svelte hips.

Start Easily, Work Up Gradually

SUPPLENESS is the aim. Start out easily with exercise and work up gradually. The time of day to exercise matters little—the important thing is to make it the same time every day if possible, for that helps establish the habit . . . then it's in the groove. The time to avoid vigorous exercise is within an hour and a half after meals, and before retiring if it is too stimulating for you. Sound sleep is important in toning the will power.

Action for today: Set aside the time for exercise . . . and act on the streamlining impulse.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE spirit of Mayfair, the Cafe of All Nations, is shown by the 8-to-9-foot world maps painted on the walls and the costumes of the waitresses representing many countries. But every Tuesday night it sticks strictly to home. Floridians reign from 5:30 to 8:30—when the Florida State Society holds its weekly meeting in the corner room.

This week, however, a real traveler was with them. She's originally from Lakeland, Fla., but Frances Langford's only touch with home these days is a meeting such as the Tuesday get-together.

Here for the Automobile Show at the Armory, Frances looked beautiful—and remained silent. Those performances for the automobile business comprise a strenuous enough schedule for the vocal chords. She was at the Mayfair as the guest of Congressman Urlong of Florida.

Sammy Seymour and his trio played for them, as usual, from 5:30 to 6:15 and from 8:30 to 11:30 p. m. His group consists of a bass, double clarinet and sax and piano.

THE Casino Royal has a good comedy dance team in their current show. The Selandias, hailing from Denmark, do comedy takeoffs of the usual Hollywood stars, but become more original in their impressions of "Snow White and Dopey" and "Hitler and Fraulein." Also to their credit are some Scandinavian dances.

Tapster in the same show, Jane Whitney progressed to night-club work the hard way. She started out as a trapeze elephant rider with Ringling Bros. Ray Lidley spins a one-wheel cycle around the stage and juggles at the same time.

THERE'S an opportunity for women musicians at the New Colonial Hotel, with the Interstate Society dances. Johnny Wolford and his orchestra stage these Saturday night dances. Not connected with the Washington State societies or the hotel, they fill a need for a Saturday dance that's more like a private affair than an evening in night clubs.

Now the group wants more space for the customers; with the opening of another room, a second orchestra is needed. Hence the call for women musicians who are young and attractive. If necessary, Johnny Wolford will form the orchestra. Application should be made to the Interstate Society at 1507 M st. nw.

The Raleigh Hotel's Pall Mall Room is finally settling down to a small orchestra as entertainment, after two hectic efforts to get out of the groove most hotels have formed for themselves. The Raleigh is right back in it now, and seems to find it the most successful way of conducting the Pall Mall Room.

Don Samaritan and his orchestra are going into their second month there. And an extra day has been tacked onto their schedules—instead of appearing Wednesday through Saturday, it's now Tuesday through Saturday.

Bandleader Samaritan has been in the business since he left high school in New York City at the age of 16. A vocalist, guitarist and conductor, he once sang with Johnny Shain's group. His past appearances include Detroit's Town Pump and New York's Copacabana.

Miss Vincent, Mr. Mooney Wed

Miss Frances Ballard Vincent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Vincent of Greenwich, Conn., formerly of Washington, was married February 20 to Thomas W. Mooney, the ceremony taking place at noon at the winter home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. G. E. Vincent, in Venice, Fla. The bridegroom is the son of Col. and Mrs. John E. Mooney of St. Louis.

Mr. Vincent gave his daughter in marriage and Miss Sally Vincent was her sister's maid of honor. Huntington Block of Washington served as best man.

The bride attended Brearley School, New York; Putney School, Putney, Vt., and was graduated from the University of Chicago. She was a nurses' aide during the war.

Mr. Mooney is a graduate of Western Military Academy and received his B.S. degree from Washington University in St. Louis. He did graduate work at the University of Munich and was in the Army Air Force. He received his Foreign Service appointment in June, 1944.

To Hold Fashion Show

A fashion show for the benefit of Grace Episcopal Church, Alexandria, will be held at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Alexandria Recreation Center, Cameron and Harvard sts. Tickets may be obtained from Miss Alice Martin or Mrs. Emma Middlebrook. Fashions will be by the Lois Shop of Alexandria.

Wellesley Club Will Entertain Area High School Seniors

The Beauvoir School will be the scene of a tea Sunday sponsored by the Washington Wellesley Club for all seniors and juniors of private and public high schools in this area who are interested in attending Wellesley College.

The guests will be greeted by members of the scholarship and acquaintanceship committees of the local alumnae group. Movies of life at Wellesley will be shown and recent graduates of the college will assist at the tea table.

Mrs. George L. Meleney, president of the Washington Wellesley Club; Mrs. Elizabeth G. Taylor, chairman of the scholarship committee, and Mrs. Thomas J. Barlow, chairman of the acquaintanceship committee, will be hostesses.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

It's an Old Story, But Who Wrote It?

The other day I heard a story with a familiar ring, and immediately set to work to identify its author.

I told our Washington Post library that it sounded like Mark Twain to me, but they reported back that they found no trace of it.

Next I tried our office scholars, but even Joe Lally was stumped. So I wasn't surprised when the Library of Congress also admitted defeat. Joe knows practically everything the Library knows.

Now there's nothing to do but turn to you District Liners for help. Can anybody identify the author of this anecdote which illustrates the merits of brevity?

The preacher told his audience that he was about to pass the collection plate for a worthy cause. Convinced that he should participate in this good work, the author slipped a $50 bill from his pocket, and prepared to do his part.

But as the preacher spoke on, the author had time to reconsider. "No use overdoing it," he thought. The 50 was replaced by a 20.

As the sermon wore on, and the seat got harder, the size of the prospective contribution grew smaller.

Gradually, it dwindled to the few odd coins in the author's pocket.

And when the collection plate finally came around, instead of contributing — he swiped two dollars out of it.

I know you've heard it before. But who wrote it?

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

One of your readers has complained that the long commercials on radio serials put her to sleep.

My problem is that my favorite serials make me cry. I'll be stirring the soup at the kitchen range while Portia faces life, and as I wonder whether she and Walter will ever find peace and contentment, the tears come rolling down my cheeks.

Why? What will it get me?

Mrs. E. A. Arneson
5808 Dewet st.
Cheverly, Md.

Dear Mrs. Arneson:

Watery soup.

Bill

P. S. Don't feel so self-conscious about it. A sympathetic reaction to the heroine's troubles is perfectly normal. That's why soap operas are so popular with millions of listeners, and why so many people have to blow their noses at a sad movie.

MISCELLANY

The nicest thing about my job is that it brings me almost daily proof of the well-worn line, "People are nicer than anybody." Edward Schwartz of 1355 Peabody st. nw. reports that when he became ill and was taken to Garfield Hospital, he was worried about what would happen to his business. But his friends stepped in and "kept it running as well as it ever did under me—maybe better" . . . J. K. M. Harrison invites me to drop down to his Acorn Farm outside Gainesville, Va., to see his 10 fine cocker spaniels, and adds the extra inducement: "Bar opens at 6 p. m." Hmmmm! For a morning newspaperman, that's before lunch . . . Speaking of dogs, Mrs. Samuel J. Kryder of 100 E. Hamilton ave., Silver Spring, Md., offers the opinion that the quarantine on pets out that way will have a beneficial effect on a good many owners—who have seldom bothered to "walk" their dogs heretofore, and have missed part of the fun of owning a pooch. "Besides," she adds, "dogs shouldn't be permitted to run wild over other people's property, anyhow" . . . A. D. Hagle of 4417 New Hampshire ave. nw. gives the deadpan treatment to my story about the cop who asked me whether I could read and write. Asks District Liner Hagle: "What was your answer?" . . . Sir, I'll have you know that I never object to being the butt of a joke, but in your case I'm willing to make an exception . . . Wanda B. Cook suspects that all the magazine salesmen in America have descended on Fairlington. She's getting tired of saying "no" to them several times a day, because some of them refuse to take a courteous "no" for an answer. "One high-pressure expert pushed his way in yesterday," she reports "and I actually had to push him out to get rid of him. You can imagine how furious I was—he was over 6 feet tall" . . . Yes, I can imagine, Wanda. And when he reported back to his sales manager, he probably listed you as a "dubious prospect."

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Dean K. Brundage, 2701 N. 24th st., Arlington, Va.: I passed your jingle along to the managing editor. He's not only the man who handles such complaints, but a pretty fair rhymster himself.

SMILE WHEN YOU WRITE SUCH THINGS, PODNER

The period between March 6 and 11 has been proclaimed "National Smile Week." The official announcement says:

"Everybody will be expected to smile, and make somebody else smile."

This is clearly a wasteful duplication of effort. If everybody smiles, what need is there to make somebody else smile?

What's more, they couldn't have picked a worse time for National Smile Week. Imagine trying to smile on March 11, with a March 15 deadline for your income tax hovering over you.

In short, I don't think I favor the idea. I'm going to keep right on publishing this column between March 6 and 11, to make sure that people do NOT smile.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Andrews Offered GOP Post

By Drew Pearson

Bert Andrews, Pulitzer Prize-winning chief of the New York Herald Tribune's Washington Bureau, has been offered the man-size job of breathing life into the Republican Party.

Andrews

Officially, Andrews' position would be GOP Director of Public Relations—a job now vacant. However, in view of Andrews' thorough knowledge of Washington politics, GOP Chairman Guy Gabrielson is expected to give him an almost free hand in guiding the party's destiny.

Though hard pressed for funds, the Republican National Committee feels that Andrews would perform political miracles and consequently have offered him a $40,000 contract to run for seven years.

Lewis' Tragic Climax

John L. Lewis, at the age of 70, has reached the most tragic climax of his long career.

His tragedy lies in that he has done more for one great segment of labor than any other individual in history, yet the more he has done for the miners, the less demand he has created for their product. As a result other fuels today have become almost as important as coal.

Another tragedy is that, in waging his battle, John L. and his bushy eyebrows, his stentorian statements and his bulldozing manner have recome such a symbol of dislike to the American public that there is little sympathy for the miners he represents. And they deserve sympathy.

Finally, John L., aged, lonely and at the peak of his career, appears to have lost control of his miners for the first time. He had partly lost control during the three-day week, which many of them blamed on him, not understanding that the demand for coal had lessened.

Now they are sore at the operators and Taft-Hartley, and the Government which has invoked the T-H Act.

Sick Industry

The truth is that the coal industry is sick. And Lewis, by his work stoppages to win wage increases, has made it sicker. Every strike he called, every wage boost he won increased the demand for oil and natural gas, until today only 26 percent of the Nation's passenger trains burn coal, as against 68 percent two years ago. Today, also, so many factories, electric power plants and homes are turning to oil that it is doubtful the mines will ever need to work much more than three days a week except in case of emergencies.

That is why President Truman, if he really wanted to solve the coal crisis, could have appointed not a fact-finding board for wages but a fuel commission.

What the Nation needs to know is whether certain unproductive mines should not be closed down with other mines operating full time; whether some miners should not move to other jobs, allowing other mines to work full time. In brief, what the very sick coal industry needs is not prolonged bickering, but over-all planning.

The Army Walks

Testifying before the House Armed Services Committee, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson was asked why the Draft Act had to be extended to get men into the Army.

"We don't need legislation to get recruits for the Navy and Air Forces," remarked Congressman Doyle of Long Beach, Calif.

"Mr. Doyle's question can be answered very simply," interrupted Chairman Carl Vinson of Georgia. "The Navy floats . . . the Air Force flies . . . but the Army walks."
